In the following table the total expenditure, exclusive of repairs and new buildings, is divided into the five items of the appropriation, under the charge of the School Committee, showing the net amount expended for each during twenty-seven years and nine months :

The foregoing tables include all the running expenses of the schools, and form the basis for computing the rate per pupil. The total running expenses, compared with those for 1902-03, show an increase of forty-three cents in the rate per pupil.

SCHOOL ACCOMMODATIONS.

With the reopening of the schools in September of each year, the question whether sufficient accommodations are ready for all children who may present themselves for admission becomes of importance. Not infrequently, unwarranted and erroneous statements are publicly made that large numbers of children are excluded from school on account of lack of adequate provision for their reception, and surprise is expressed that definite information on this matter cannot be given by school officials on the opening day of the term. As a matter of fact, it requires several days for the school system to become adjusted and to get into running order, and for the pupils to be so distributed that a crowded situation in one building may be relieved by transferring the surplus therein to the next nearest school-house, where vacant desks are available. In the course of a few days this adjustment of pupils and accommodations is made, and it is then usually found that there are but very few children throughout the entire city who cannot be suitably provided for.

This year a very gratifying situation in this respect has been found to exist. The whole number of pupils in the public day schools, not including those in two special schools and the seven special classes, as reported September 30, was 91,437, an increase of 2,259 over the corresponding number one year ago. Of this number, 83,139 were in regular class-rooms, 1,947 were in rooms not specifically intended for class purposes, but in buildings owned by the city, 4,608 were in portable school-houses, and 1,743 in rented quarters. The number on the waiting list was stated to be 272; but of this 272 reported as being without school accommodations, 255 were candidates for admission to the Kindergartens, and throughout the entire city there were but seventeen primary children who were unable, at the time the report was made, to gain admission to the public schools because of insufficient accommodations.

In view of the situation existing in other large cities, especially New York, where it is freely admitted that the school accommodations are absolutely inadequate to meet the demand upon them, we submit that there is little just ground for complaint in Boston on this score.

SUPERINTENDENT AND BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The biennial term of the Superintendent and members of the Board of Supervisors expired on August 31 of the past year, and in the preceding July Mr. George H. Conley, who had held the office of Supervisor since 1886, was elected to the position of Superintendent, succeeding Mr. Edwin P. Seaver, whose term of service had embraced twenty-four years. In his communication to the Board accepting the office, Mr. Conley said:

“It is not enough to maintain the high standard of the past; the schools must be made educational instruments of ever-increasing efficiency. The liberal contributions made by the people of this city for the education of youth entitle them to the very best schools which earnest and conscientious effort can produce.

“It will be my endeavor to promote every measure calculated to secure substantial educational progress, confidently relying upon the support of this Board and the co-operation of the teachers.”

Undertaking his new duties in the spirit expressed in such words, Mr. Conley can hardly fail to accomplish, during his administration, much that will result in benefit to the school system and honor for himself.

To fill the vacancy in the Board of Supervisors created by the promotion of Mr. Conley, the Board, in September, elected Mr. Augustine L. Rafter, who had previously held the position of principal of the Martin District. Earlier in the year Mr. George H. Martin, who had been a member of the Board of Supervisors for nearly twelve years, resigned to accept the secretaryship of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, and was succeeded by Mr. Jeremiah E. Burke, then superintendent of schools in Lawrence, Mass., who was elected at the meeting of April 26.

The membership of the Board of Supervisors, with one exception, has entirely changed since 1902, and as a matter of record we append a statement containing the names and length of service of the various Supervisors from the establishment of the Board in 1876 to the present time.

APPOINTMENT OF TEACHERS.

One of the important pieces of legislation passed by the Board during the past year relates to the appointment of teachers. Prior to 1897, the sub-committees in charge of the various schools and school divisions held the power of recommending to a sub-committee on nominations, which in turn transmitted their recommendations to the Board, all appointments of instructors. In 1897 the rules were changed, and the Board of Supervisors was required to recommend to the committee in charge, in writing, a candidate for any vacancy in the force of instructors, which recommendations, whether or not adopted by the committee, were required to be reported by them to the Board. In the following year (1898) a general reconstruction of the rules went into effect, and the appointment, transfer and removal of all instructors, including principals and directors, were vested in the Superintendent, subject only to the approval of the full Board. In 1899 this rule was modified to the extent of requiring that all such appointments, removals and transfers, excepting the appointment of temporary teachers, should be approved by the committee in charge before being submitted by the Superintendent to the Board. Three years later (1902) this modification was rescinded, and the authority of the Superintendent to perform such acts, subject only to the approval of the Board, was restored to him. Again, during the past year, has a change been made, the present rule being practically the same as that adopted in 1899, and all such matters, excepting original appointments of temporary teachers for a period not exceeding two months, must be submitted by the Superintendent to the committee in charge of the school or district concerned, which committee is required, unless such appointment, transfer or removal shall be previously withdrawn by the Superintendent, to report thereon to the Board at a meeting not later than one month from the date of such submission to said committee, and after an interval of two weeks the Board may take final action thereon.

FIRE DRILLS.

The regulations prescribe that the fire-alarm signal shall be given at least once each month from September to April. Appreciating the importance of a literal observance of this rule, the Board in March of 1903 ordered an investigation of the matter, which disclosed the fact that far too little attention had been paid to the requirements of the rule in a number of schools. Although the danger of a serious fire in a school building is somewhat remote, the possibility of a panic and resulting injury or loss of life to pupils is always present, and the importance of so training the children that they can be depended upon when the emergency arises to leave the school-house calmly, quickly and without confusion, cannot be overestimated. The Board therefore directed the Superintendent to see that the rule relating to this subject was thereafter rigidly enforced, and in those schools where adequate facilities for giving the signal did not exist, to report that fact to the proper authorities.

A year later—April, 1904—the Board ordered a new investigation of the matter, and this time the delinquencies were comparatively few in number. In each such case the committee to whom the matter was referred made it plain to the principals concerned that the rule must be strictly enforced thereafter, and emphasized the importance of absolute compliance with its terms in order that a possible calamity might be averted.

BATHS.

The Paul Revere School-house, for primary pupils, situated on Prince street, in the North End, and occupied in February, 1899, was the first public school building in Boston to have bathing facilities for pupils. The proposition to install such accommodations met with strong opposition from a minority of the Board on legal, hygienic and administrative grounds. The advocates of the measure finally succeeded in having the "experiment," as it was termed, tried, and shower baths for both sexes were accordingly placed in the basement of this building. The innovation proved so successful that the School Board, and subsequently the Schoolhouse Commissioners, have, from time to time, placed similar accommodations in various new buildings, and have added them as well to school-houses already built, until at the present time the extent of such facilities is as shown in the following table:

The following statement showing the number of school baths taken during the past year in buildings below the grade of high schools, where more than very limited bathing accommodations are available, is interesting, as showing that they are fully appreciated by those for whose benefit they have been provided. It is, perhaps, needless to add that the use of the baths by pupils is entirely voluntary on their part, and deprivation of the privilege is frequently found to be an effective means of promoting good discipline.

NORMAL SCHOOL.

Several changes with reference to the Normal School have been made during the year which are of considerable educational importance.

It will be remembered that, during the discussion concerning the establishing of a three-years' course at the Normal School in 1903, a proposition was made that men should be admitted to the school. The Corporation Counsel, however, rendered an opinion that such action would be illegal. The Board then passed an order authorizing application to the Legislature for permission to admit men to the Normal School under such restrictions as might be deemed advisable. This authority was given to the School Committee, under chapter 212 of the Acts of 1904, approved April 9.

In the early summer the Board passed an order that men graduates of colleges be admitted to the Boston

Normal School from the beginning of the next school year. The response to this permission was much larger than its most sanguine advocates had anticipated. Nineteen men were admitted to the school in September, and at the same time the number of women college graduates was largely increased, twenty of whom were also received, making a section of thirty-nine college graduates — nearly four times as large as any previous year since college graduates have been admitted. If the number continues to be as large in the years to come it is the beginning of a movement of significance to our elementary schools. It must result in a larger proportion of college-bred teachers, and also of men in our grammar schools. The outcome of this first year will be watched with much interest by everyone.

Another change in the work of this school pertains to the training of teachers for special departmental work. One feature of the three-years' course of study reported by the Board of Supervisors was a course intended to prepare the Normal School pupils to be teachers of Manual Training, Sewing and Household Arts. Although the three-years' course was rejected by the School Board, it was found possible and advisable to arrange for these special subjects. A goodly number from the senior class made selections from these optional courses. To those satisfactorily completing the course in sewing, a special sewing teacher's certificate was granted in June, in addition to the regular Grammar B certificate. About one-half of those who chose the courses in Manual Training and Household Arts have continued post-graduate work in these departments during the fall, and will receive a special teacher's certificate upon satisfactorily completing the prescribed course. The importance of this change lies in the fact that in this course the Board is taking the first steps towards securing a broad and thorough professional training as the basis for work in these specialties, and the securing of special teachers in these departments who are also certificated as regular teachers. Carried out to its natural conclusion, it will mean that the work in any one school, in all departments, will be conducted by the regular teachers of that school.

The Normal School is larger this fall than at any time in its history, having three hundred pupils enrolled in the two under-graduate classes and eleven in the post-graduate. The need of new and ample quarters and proper equipment is more emphatic than ever. A site has already been acquired, and no pains should be spared to hasten the completion of the new building to be erected for its use.

MECHANIC ARTS EVENING HIGH SCHOOL.

The opportunities for free instruction in the evening high schools were increased this year by the organization of the Mechanic Arts Evening High School under the direction of the Committee on Manual Training. Classes were formed in the following departments: elementary mechanical drawing, advanced mechanical drawing, wood-working, wood-turning and pattern-making, forging and machine shop practice. Most of the instruction has been given by the regular day teachers of the Mechanic Arts High School.

The courses are adapted to meet the needs both of those who desire instruction in manual training on account of its educational value, and those who wish to extend their general knowledge of mechanical processes or to perfect themselves in particular branches. They are designed to be of special value to men who are following mechanical pursuits.

The school was opened Monday evening, September 26, and the total number of applicants for admission registered during the first month was 472. Of these only 306 could be admitted. Nearly all of the classes were crowded at the outset, but, as was to be expected, there has been considerable loss in membership. The earnest spirit shown by the students and the high character of the work accomplished indicate that the school is likely to prove a feature of the public school system which will be highly appreciated by the citizens of Boston. The sessions are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

SCHEDULE OF SALARIES FOR JANITORS.

It is gratifying to record the fact that the schedule of salaries for janitors of grammar and primary school-houses, which was adopted early in the year, has been continued in force without alteration or amendment, and has met with no serious objection to its continuance. While its originators did not claim that it was a complete and perfect schedule in all its details, they urged that it was mainly entitled to confidence and support in that it treated all janitors upon an absolute and fixed basis, leaving no room for preference to be exercised in favor of any individual. Prior to the adoption of this schedule constant complaints of irregularities in the compensation of janitors were made by employees of this class, many of which were well-grounded. These have now practically ceased, and when an application of this nature is received, the answer that the established schedule governs the entire matter and no deviation therefrom will be approved satisfactorily settles the question. The adoption of this schedule has proved even more of a success than was anticipated in removing all questions of favoritism or unfairness.

The original measurements of the buildings, upon which figures are based the respective salaries of the janitors, were made hastily and under a good deal of pressure by the Schoolhouse Custodian and his assistants, and it was but reasonable to suppose that, considering the magnitude of the work, they would contain some errors. A few mistakes have been found and corrected, but in the main the figures proved to be accurate, and surprisingly little difficulty has been experienced in putting into full operation one of the most important and complicated pieces of legislation adopted by the Board for a number of years.

It is hoped that a somewhat similar schedule may soon be established for high school-houses, and thereby bring about for buildings of this class the same equitable plan governing the compensation for janitor service that now applies to the grammar and primary school-houses.

At the last meeting of the Board in December, a new schedule applying to Evening Schools and Educational Centres (excepting High School-houses) was adopted, which is believed to be a great improvement over the system, in force for many years, based entirely upon the number of rooms occupied, and which placed the janitors of the smaller buildings at a considerable and unwarranted disadvantage compared with those having the care of the larger schools. The principal features of the new schedule may be summarized as follows: Each janitor receives \$22.50 per month for attendance, supervision and heating. This amount is arrived at on the basis of 25 cents per hour, three hours per evening, at time and one-half rates, or  $37\frac{1}{2}$  cents per hour. In addition to this, \$1.50 per month per room is allowed for cleaning, this amount being based on the estimated actual cost to the janitor of three extra cleanings each week at time and one-half rates. For halls, gymnasiums, baths, and similar accommodations, a corresponding compensation is allowed. Janitors of buildings containing engines which require the attendance of an engineer when the heating system is in operation are paid at the rate of \$15 per month in addition to the foregoing. If less than five sessions per week are held, a proportionate deduction is made from these rates.

Thus each janitor is paid alike for the amount of service rendered, and while the change was intended to, and does, in fact, substantially increase the compensation of all janitors affected, the additional expense to the city is not excessive, considering the character and extent of the service rendered.

EXHIBIT AT THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION,
ST. LOUIS.

In the early part of the year 1903, the Commissioner of Education for the World's Fair at St. Louis reserved for Boston a space in the Educational Building corresponding to that allotted to New York, St. Louis, and other large cities of this country. The School Committee of that year did not see fit to accept the offer, and the space was surrendered. Later, Massachusetts decided to make an exhibit, and the State Director urged that the schools of Boston be represented therein.

On January 26, 1904, the Board appointed a special committee of three to take charge of all matters relating to an exhibition of the work of the public schools of this city at the St. Louis Exposition, and on February 23 appropriated a sum, not exceeding $3,000, with which to defray the expenses.

The committee in charge of this matter requested Superintendent Seaver and one of the Supervisors, Mr. Maurice P. White, to arrange for such an exhibit, and the masters of the various schools were asked to send in sample work. The time for preparation was short—too short for any fancy or elaborate display, and the material sent was such as can be obtained at any time, and a fair and honest illustration of the actual work done in our schools of to-day. With the aid of teachers, the various articles were arranged for exhibition in cabinets. Though the space allotted was very limited, yet by means of these cabinets we were able to cover a space equal to more than 4,000 square feet, besides filling about 200 bound volumes, which, with the larger work of the industrial subjects, occupied show-cases, drawers, and shelves. All of our schools were represented—the Kindergartens, the Primary, Grammar and High Schools, the Normal School, the Evening Drawing Schools, the Evening Elementary and Evening High Schools, the Educational Centres, the Public Lecture System, and the Vacation Schools. And not only was every grade of school represented, but nearly every subject taught in the schools, and this by teachers' outlines, by work by the pupils, and by numerous photographs which showed buildings, rooms, equipment, and the pupils at work: The exhibit included an excellent display of the manual training work from the Kindergarten through the Mechanic Arts High School. All the material was systematically arranged by subjects and grades, and properly labelled to assist visiting educators who desired to study a particular subject in any particular grade, and this arrangement seems to have been appreciated by teachers from all parts of the country.

While other cities expended from five to ten times as much money, and made more elaborate displays, it is doubtful if any educational exhibit from this country has been studied more than Boston's. It has been carefully and critically examined, and the many requests received for duplicates and parts of the exhibit include nearly every department and subject.

The matter of awards is interesting as showing the value of the work of our schools in the opinion of unbiased judges. The grades of awards given by the Exposition officials are: 1. Grand Prize. 2. Gold Medal. 3. Silver Medal. 4. Bronze Medal.

Boston was awarded: 1. A copy of the diploma of a Grand Prize as an important contributor to the Massachusetts Collective Exhibit. 2. A Grand Prize for the excellence of our work in the Elementary Schools (including evening and vacation schools). 3. A Grand Prize for the excellence of our work in the Secondary Schools. 4. A Gold Medal for the Normal School. 5. A Gold Medal for the Mechanic Arts

High School. 6. A Silver Medal for the Evening Drawing Schools. 7. A Gold Medal for The Horace Mann School for the Deaf and Dumb. 8. A Gold Medal for the Educational Centres. 9. A Gold Medal for the Public Lecture System in connection with our Evening Schools. Besides these, a Gold Medal and a Silver Medal were awarded to Mr. Edwin P. Seaver and Mr. Maurice P. White respectively as collaborators. The greatest number of awards received by Boston for its educational exhibit at any previous exposition was five — at the Columbian Exposition.

The high estimate put upon our work by the judges at St. Louis, and the words of appreciation concerning it from educators from various parts of our own country and from other countries who have studied it carefully, furnish a sufficient answer to any who claim that our schools are deteriorating.

EVENING LECTURES.

The system of free evening lectures, illustrated by the stereopticon, under the direction of the Committee on Evening Schools, and established in 1902, has been continued on the same general lines as heretofore. New lecture centres have been opened in the English High (South end), South Boston High, Charles Sumner (Roslindale), Quincy (city proper), Sherwin (Roxbury), and William E. Russell (Dorchester) School-houses, thus extending the advantages of the system into localities not conveniently near the centres hitherto established.

The very reasonable expense at which these lectures have been given is especially gratifying. For example, the course just completed consisted of 44 lectures, which were given at a total cost, exclusive of the compensation of the director in charge, which has not yet been determined, but including all other expenses, excepting for heat and light, of about $1,356, an average of $30.82 per lecture. The lectures were attended by 24,506 persons, and the average cost per auditor was therefore less than six cents.

VACATION SCHOOLS.

Ten vacation schools and playgrounds were opened on July 12, the former closing after a term of five weeks on August 12, while the term of the playgrounds was extended for one additional week, closing on August 19. This difference in the length of term between the schools and the playgrounds was made largely because it was felt that the National Encampment of the G. A. R. held in this city during the last week of the usual term would probably so materially reduce the attendance of the pupils as to render it a matter of wise economy to close the schools entirely a week earlier than was originally intended. The playgrounds, however, were kept open in order that the smaller children, who would otherwise have been on the streets in the midst of hurrying crowds, might have some safe and convenient place in which to spend their time.

The locations of the schools and playgrounds, and the attendance at each, are shown in the following tables :

The general increase in attendance over former years was due largely to the adoption and extension of military drill, field-garden work, and physical culture. The wisdom of instituting military drill was especially marked. This innovation attracted a large number of boys who hitherto have felt that the schools had no attraction for them, and the interest shown and progress made in such tactics was remarkable. This interest extended to adults as well, and hundreds of grown persons gathered daily to watch the exercises.

On the closing day field sports were held on Franklin Field, and the various athletic contests were entered into with great zest, and gave the boys a coveted opportunity to exhibit their proficiency in drills, out-of-door games, and races.

More classes in cookery, wood-working, and bent-iron work were established in every district, and although accompanied in many instances by the decided disadvantage of distance from the main school and want of adequate facilities, were so well attended that it was found impossible to give daily lessons to all who wished instruction. The teachers of cookery found opportunities to instruct their pupils to some extent in household sanitation and practical house-keeping, and both cookery and sewing found favor with many boys.

The success of the Vacation Schools, and the low cost per pupil compared with various other large cities, is due mainly to the ability of our teachers to retain the interest of large classes, and their constant effort to impress upon the minds of their pupils the important fact that each should do his part in return for the many benefits received.

The total cost of Vacation Schools and Playgrounds for the financial year 1904-05 has been :

Salaries of instructors . . . . .	$15,121 50
Salaries of janitors . . . . .	1,210 00
Supplies . . . . .	1,747 73
	$18,079 23

When we consider that approximately one-sixth of the public school population of the city has been cared for more than five weeks at the cost above stated, the expense sinks into insignificance in comparison with the great amount of good accomplished, and the steadily increasing registration indicates that the Vacation School system should be regarded as an essential part of our public schools, and entitled to adequate and liberal support.

EDUCATIONAL CENTRES.

The 1903-04 term of the Educational Centres came to a close on Friday, March 25, 1904, with every evidence that they had continued to gain in public support and approval. It was of course intended that they should be reopened with the Evening Schools, on the last Monday of the following September, but owing to financial considerations it was found impossible to resume their sessions until Monday, October 24, when the same Centres previously established were enabled to open their doors to eager applicants for admission. There are in all five Centres situated respectively in East Boston, North End, West End, Roxbury and South Boston, which are in session on the five evenings of the week, Mondays to Fridays inclusive, excepting the one in the West End, which is closed on Friday evenings.

From time to time since the establishment of these Centres it had been pointed out that while the evening as well as the day schools are governed by regulations adopted by the School Board, and pursue definite courses of study, the Centres were free from such restrictions. To meet this criticism, which was recognized as reasonable, especially in view of the fact that the field of endeavor of the Centres has now become defined with some degree of clearness, a set of regulations similar to those applying to the Evening Schools was drawn up and adopted by the full Board at the meeting of October 11. At the following meeting a course of study, prepared by the Superintendent, and which follows, was approved :

1. Lectures.
2. Studies required for civil service examinations.
3. English to foreigners ; study classes ; boys' clubs.
4. Cookery and housekeeping.
5. Sewing : hand and machine ; patching ; mending ; darning.
6. Dressmaking : cutting from pattern.
7. Millinery : hatmaking and trimming.
8. Embroidery : plain and artistic needlework.
9. Applied physiology.
10. Braiding and weaving.
11. Mechanics : metal and woodwork ; steam ; electricity ; printing.
12. Drawing and color.
13. Physical training.
14. Music.

The salaries of instructors in the Educational Centres are at the following rates per evening : principals, $5 ; first assistants, $2.50 ; assistants, $2. To keep the required records, and render such clerical assistance as is needed, secretaries are employed, who receive $2.50 per evening; and matrons, who care especially for the convenience of the female pupils, are paid $1.50 per evening.

Each Centre, in addition to a principal, is entitled to one instructor for every twenty pupils in attendance, and an additional instructor for a majority fraction thereof. Of the quota of instructors thus allowed, one first assistant may be appointed for each industrial subject in which there is an average nightly attendance of at least sixty pupils, and employing simultaneously at least three teachers, and an additional first assistant may be appointed for each two hundred pupils in average nightly attendance for the entire school. Instructors are dismissed at the close of any month during which the attendance has fallen below the required minimum permitting their employment. No female teacher of a day school may serve in an Educational Centre, except as secretary, more than three evenings a week. At the close of the term certificates of proficiency are awarded to pupils who have satisfactorily completed the course of instruction in any subject. The length of session is two hours, and may be from 7 to 9 o'clock, or from 7.30 to 9.30 o'clock, P.M., as found convenient.

The following brief account of some of the more salient features of the work of each of these Centres is given for the purpose of affording a general and comprehensive idea of the scope of their activities during the year 1904. This period, of course, embraces parts of two school terms.

EAST BOSTON EDUCATIONAL CENTRE.

(Chapman School-house.)

The average attendance at the East Boston Educational Centre, October–December, 1904, was 567, a considerable increase over the previous year, whereas the corps of teachers is but two-thirds as large. Furthermore, the transfer of the class in physical training to the local Evening High School has alone prevented a much larger increase. Five other classes were dropped on account of lack of funds. Twelve different courses were offered, for which more than 2,600 persons have registered.

Dressmaking is the most popular subject, and has been selected by 624 pupils. Following closely is the course in embroidery, in which 588 pupils are enrolled. In millinery 383 pupils have registered. In cookery four evenings each week are devoted to individual work, and one evening to demonstrations by the teacher, and 168 pupils have been enrolled. China painting has proved a successful innovation, and, with but one teacher, 144 pupils have made designs and painted them upon flat and round pieces. The classes for home study are large and the members regular in their attendance. Although games are allowed for a part of each evening, the girls' class prefers study. With the boys this is not so true. The regular attendance, good order, and interest manifested are very noticeable, and in both classes 204 pupils are registered. Lace-making is one of the new subjects, and there are now fifty-five pupils enrolled in this class. Both pillow and needle laces are made, and the results obtained have kept up the interest and enthusiasm of the pupils to a marked degree.

A class in printing, which is also new this year, is located in a printing office near the school. The course includes typesetting, proofreading, and display. It has been the most regularly attended class in the Centre, and has twenty-nine pupils enrolled.

In the wood-working class an experienced cabinet-maker is employed as instructor, whose extensive experience enables him to obtain excellent results from the pupils.

Lectures on electricity and nursing have been given, and well attended. In the former subject practical questions are considered in a semi-technical way, under the guidance of an expert electrician, by the 102 men enrolled. Even more popular have been the talks on practical nursing. Armed with note books and pencils a class averaging 100 members has been present at each lecture, out of a total registration of 144.

A series of lectures on travel, illustrated by the stereopticon, began early in December, accompanied by a course in collateral reading.

A course in steam engineering, following the plan adopted last year, was begun early in December, in connection with which a question box has been conducted. Stereopticon illustrations aided the lecturer in this subject, and books loaned by the Public Library were available for reference use.

NORTH END EDUCATIONAL CENTRE.

(Hancock School-house.)

It has been the purpose of the North End Educational Centre to carry on the different lines of work so successfully begun in former terms, as the limited amount available for its support prohibited the exploiting of new fields. Some subjects pursued last year have been omitted, as a careful investigation indicated that they did not especially meet the needs of the residents of the North End.

The total registration has reached approximately 600. The average attendance has been about 200 each evening.

Classes in millinery, dressmaking, embroidery, cookery, carpentry, printing, and English for foreigners have been organized, and successfully conducted. The classes in English have proved most attractive to the adult members of the Centre, while those in industrial subjects appealed to the younger element. The class in carpentry is composed of both young men and young women under twenty years of age, and meets five evenings each week. The work accomplished is most gratifying, the spirit excellent, and the reasons given by many of the members of the class for joining it show an earnest, thoughtful habit of mind. The class in printing is made up of young men under twenty years of age, and meets three evenings each week. Some undertake the work in order to further perfect themselves in the trade in which they are already engaged, and others for the purpose of earning their livelihood.

The classes in dressmaking and millinery are mainly composed of women who come into the Centre in order to make dresses and trim hats for their own wear, while the real purpose of the instruction is to teach them the elements and successive steps in these subjects.

The classes in English seem to meet the greatest need of the adult population in the vicinity of the Centre. In these classes not only is English taught, but an attempt is made to put the pupils in touch with American ideas; in fact, these might well be termed classes for Americanizing foreigners. For example, just before Thanksgiving the Governor's proclamation, mounted on a large sheet of cardboard, was brought before the classes, and a short talk given on the Thanksgiving idea, its origin and observance.

A special effort has been made to reach the Poles living in the North End, and a class of thirty men of this nationality was organized early in the fall, and a similar class of Polish women has more recently been established.

There is also a study class, composed of about eighty girls attending the eighth and ninth grades of the day schools, who assemble each evening to prepare their lessons for the following day.

ROXBURY EDUCATIONAL CENTRE.

(Lowell School-house.)

In the dressmaking department there are five classes; one in draughting; an advanced class for those desiring to become dressmakers; a beginners' class, consisting of the younger pupils learning the first steps in cutting, fitting and finishing; a mothers' class, in which special attention is given to under and outer garments for children; and a fine sewing, patching and darning section.

The six classes in the millinery department are given instruction in frame making, shaping, covering, lining, trimming and finishing hats.

In the two sections of the embroidery department, lace-making and the popular stitches in embroidery are taught.

The cookery department offers five courses, one for each evening of the week; an advanced class for those who have previously taken the elementary course; a housekeepers' class for married women; a beginners' class for young women; a section designed especially for instruction in carving, serving and table decoration; and a class for instruction in the preparation of suitable food for the sick.

In wood-working there are three courses for each sex; a beginners', advanced, and a special class for those who have already taken advanced work.

There are elementary and advanced classes for those who desire to make special preparation for the civil service examinations for city and State employment.

Gymnastic instruction is given in three divisions: one for working boys, one for men, and a third for women.

Beginning in January, 1904, a course for salespeople was established in this Centre, its object being to develop greater intelligence in the sale of goods; to afford training in the manner of approaching and holding the attention of a customer; and to make possible a more adequate acquaintance with the manufacture of textiles and the factors determining their values.

In the same month a class in the theory and practice of bricklaying was opened under the direction of an inspector from the City Engineer's Department. This course took the form of practical talks and discussions on the materials used in bricklaying and masonry; the tests for qualities of lime and cement; their strength under various conditions; the use of sand, gravel, broken stone, and piling for foundations; the building of superstructures and sewers. This course aroused great interest on the part of the pupils pursuing it.

In February a course was begun on types, designs, and the proper operation of boilers, the handling of steam, and the management of engines.

A course on electricity was also established, treating of Ohm's law, alternating currents, polyphase and multiphase machines, and synchronous motors. Both this and the preceding course were conducted by instructors connected with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A class in music has been organized; and also one in which English is taught to foreigners.

The total registration at this Centre is nearly 2,400, and the average attendance about 600 per evening.

SOUTH BOSTON EDUCATIONAL CENTRE.

The work of the South Boston Educational Centre has largely been along industrial lines, in order to avoid a needless duplication of the courses offered in the Evening High and Elementary Schools established in that section of the city. Classes have been established in steam engineering, electricity, bricklaying, salesmanship for clerks and department store employees, domestic science, including home nursing, housekeeping and kindred subjects; and in addition a technical library has been opened, and four working boys' clubs established. These courses were selected in preference to other possible subjects because a canvass of conditions seemed to justify such action. South Boston cannot be said to represent any one type of calling or pursuit; it is rather a residential quarter for those following a widely different variety of occupations. Certain industries, however, are largely represented. Machine and boiler shops are fairly numerous; there is at least one notable shipyard; and there are a number of electrical plants, one of which is of considerable importance. A large number of clerks and department store employees make this portion of the city their home.

A combined course in steam engineering and electricity was begun in November, 1903, under the direction of an instructor from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with sixty men. This number grew until about one hundred and twenty-five were enrolled. The class was then divided into two sections, one taking up electricity and the other steam engineering, each section meeting two evenings a week. Some of the members of these classes took the subject of mechanical drawing also, others entered the civil service class, and still others spent a portion of the session in study in the technical library. The heating and ventilating plant of the Bigelow School-house, being modern and complete in every way, was of great service, and its advantages were availed of to the fullest extent. Problems were assigned to different members of the class for personal investigation, and in this way a large amount of practical instruction in connection with an operating plant was given. About 85 to 90 men attended this course.

In the electrical course, the instructor first gave a series of lectures upon the theory of the generation and handling of electrical currents, followed by practical work. The men actually constructed model batteries, wired magnets, and made joints. The average attendance was about twenty-five.

The course in bricklaying and masonry was intended especially for journeymen bricklayers and masons who desired to perfect themselves in their trade. Men who could do a set piece of work, but who lacked the ability to read plans, came to supply their deficiencies in that respect. A city inspector, an authority in his line, was in charge of this course, and while twenty men were enrolled at its beginning the attendance was not well maintained. Possibly the pupils lacked the spur of persevering ambition which characterized the spirit of most of the other classes.

The course in salesmanship began in January. The theory for its organization was that some sort of definite instruction and training would be of value in fitting persons for such employment, especially in the large department stores, where there is now a demand for some sort of definite standard of efficiency. This course was advertised extensively, an exceedingly competent instructor employed, and a good deal of encouragement received from the proprietors of some of the larger stores in the city. Perhaps thirty pupils registered, of which number not over fifteen were in constant attendance. It would therefore appear that at present the conviction that such training is of a real and definite value is less strong in the minds of employees than in those of employers.

This, though somewhat discouraging, is far from indicating that the necessity for some sort of efficient training for such employees does not now exist, and it is believed that this fact will be more widely recognized as the products of such training begin to make their superiority felt. At any rate, considerable confidence in the soundness of this theory is felt by those best qualified to judge, for a similar course on slightly different lines was begun in the following October at the entire expense, except for room, heat and light, of six of the largest firms in the city conducting dry goods or department stores, who agreed to furnish employment to all pupils satisfactorily completing the prescribed course. The work of the regular instructor has been supplemented by frequent talks on salesmanship given by the heads of departments from the various stores interested in this movement. The class for the present term consists of about thirty persons, about equally divided as to sex.

The boys' club experiment, though not of long duration, proved a very successful and important move. One hundred and fifty boys, between the ages of fifteen and twenty, were organized into four different clubs; and when the Centre closed in the spring the clergyman of one of the neighboring parishes voluntarily provided accommodations for these clubs in order to prevent their disintegration. until the opening of the new term in the fall, when sessions were resumed in the Centre.

The courses in dressmaking, millinery, and embroidery have passed from the experimental to the regular stage. These subjects had been successfully carried on during the preceding year, and the principal change attempted was a division of the work into elementary and advanced grades. The millinery department was perhaps the most popular. Pupils beginning this subject usually do so with the hope of making hats for their own wear, but the instruction given is first upon the principles of the art. Deftness of touch is developed, and the proper handling of materials shown. The beginner makes bows, rosettes, linings, and so approaches the construction of complete hats gradually. Substitute material is used almost entirely during the first half of the term. Those who have passed the elementary instruction are given advanced work, and the time of the class is almost wholly given up to the making of complete hats, particular attention being paid to style, variety, and taste.

A similar arrangement exists in the dressmaking course, although the division between elementary and advanced instruction is less closely defined. While this department is largely attended, the attraction seems to be more on the ground of immediate needs than in the acquiring of the principles of the art. Applicants are permitted to choose for themselves whether they will enter the elementary or the advanced classes.

The embroidery department is also divided into two groups. In the lower grade are found pupils with little or no experience in the subject, while in the advanced classes intricate patterns are executed, and some very elaborate pieces produced. A supplementary elementary class for the younger girls, ranging in age from fourteen to sixteen, is also maintained. These confine their efforts principally to simple needlework.

The department in basketry has proved of considerable interest, and many pupils were instructed in this subject. While basketry does not especially offer the useful application of material to home utility and comfort, it is a valuable means of developing manual dexterity and artistic inventiveness, and many of the objects constructed, such as waste baskets, work baskets, mats and straw hats, are of practical value. From motives of economy this class was not continued during the term just closed.

The course in music proved both popular and useful. Emphasis was especially laid on chorus work. Such classes met twice each week, and the average attendance was about one hundred. The classes in theory and vocal culture were necessarily much smaller, but were, nevertheless, well attended. Popular concerts were given in the school hall at frequent intervals, and individuals as well as groups assisted in the programs. At the midwinter exhibition in December, 1903, the main chorus rendered the cantata entitled "Building of the Ship." In the following spring a group of fifty gave a public performance of an opera in one of the neighboring halls, at which there was evidenced a considerable amount of local interest.

The civil service classes were well attended and in popular demand. Both elementary and advanced sections were established.

The gymnasium was opened five nights each week for the term ending last spring, three evenings being allotted to the men and boys, and two evenings to the women and girls. The gymnasium connected with the Bigelow School-house is somewhat small and the facilities limited, while in the city gymnasium on D street near by there are much better accommodations. It did not seem wise, therefore, to attempt to do more than could readily be accomplished with the means available.

The enrollment for the term 1903-04 was 4,800; for the term 1904 (beginning in October), 2,200. The decrease is accounted for by the fact that several large departments were necessarily discontinued on account of lack of funds, including basketry, physical training, phonography, and study rooms. The average number belonging, 1903-04, was about 1,500, and nearly 1800 for the present term. The average attendance, 1903-04, 783; for the present term, 651.

WEST END EDUCATIONAL CENTRE.

(Mayhew School-house.)

This Centre is located in a district in which, like the North End, the foreign element largely predominates. While its membership is thoroughly representative of the various nationalities found in its neighborhood, perhaps two-thirds of its attendants are Jews, and for this reason, and also because of the necessity of reducing the expense connected with this branch of our system, no classes are held on Friday evenings, on which night there are occasional lectures or social entertainments unattended by public expense.

At the reopening of this Centre in October the following subjects were offered: dressmaking, millinery, embroidery, cookery, and housekeeping, preparation for the civil service examinations, and English for foreigners ; — the following subjects, previously given, being reluctantly removed from the list : wood-working, parliamentary procedure, home study, music, and physical training. The use of a room for a boys' club, and of another for a class in elocution and dramatic art, were granted without expense to the city for instruction, and, through the aid of friends, the Free Legal Aid Bureau, connected with this Centre, has been continued.

The special work undertaken by this Centre is to supplement many other agencies in the work of Americanizing people of foreign birth, and fitting them for new institutions and new environment. That this purpose has in a measure been fulfilled is evident from the fact that last season, without interfering with the evening school attendance, more than one thousand men and women registered in this Centre for instruction in English. To meet the needs of these people, a liberal number of interpreters have been employed, and have proved very acceptable to men and women of mature years who hesitate to enter classes conducted solely by teachers of a nationality other than their own. These classes in English are always serious and earnest, and the work more comprehensive than the name alone implies.

Although the races most largely represented in the West End do not enter the various branches of the civil service to any marked degree, an excellent class for preparation for such employment is maintained.

Three rooms are devoted to sewing and dress-making. In these rooms and in others assigned to millinery and embroidery, under the direction of competent instructors, good results are achieved.

For the present term, about 1,200 persons have been registered, 142 of whom are enrolled in the dress-making classes, 128 in millinery, 156 in embroidery, 44 in civil service, 25 in cookery, 34 in physical training, and more than 700 in the classes for instructing foreigners in English. The average attendance has been approximately 360.

The foregoing account of the Educational Centres, necessarily brief and imperfect, has consumed so much space that any extended comment with regard to them is impossible. They appear to have found a place in the educational system of our city, and to meet the needs of the community; certainly they have received popular support in large measure. It is important that in their further development great attention should be paid to local conditions, and that the Centres should merit the confidence and co-operation of those who are most instrumental in shaping public opinion; and it is hoped that clergymen, merchants and civic societies especially will continue to be interested in them and to assist in the shaping of their future growth.

One statement must reluctantly be added: The balance of the appropriation available for school expenses during the current financial year having been exhausted, it was found necessary to bring the term of all the Centres to a close during the week ending Friday, December 9.

IN CONCLUSION.

To give in this report an adequate and comprehensive statement of the workings of the entire school system, and to describe all that has been accomplished during the year just closed, would too severely task the powers of this committee and the patience of the reader. Little more can be done than to select a few of the more important and interesting features of the year, and endeavor to give some idea of what has been done in different directions. It is hoped, however, that enough has been said to show that the system is not standing still, that progress is being made, that the new problems, inseparable from the development of modern life and modern education, are being met by the Board, and by its officers and instructors, with at least an earnest and sincere purpose to meet the needs of the community in educational matters with wisdom, faithfulness and efficiency. There are, no doubt, faults in administration and execution, but we believe that the system is far from the condition of stagnation, and if it were possible simply to enumerate all the different questions that in one form or another have been carefully considered during the past year, and the efforts made by committees, and by individuals and groups of individuals directly connected with the schools of this city to improve methods of instruction, to determine the value of suggested activities never before tried, and to develop more efficiently the work already undertaken, the impartial critic would unhesitatingly admit that our public schools are still the object of that unrelenting concern which is their due.

Lewis H. Dutton, principal of the Hancock District, died after a lingering illness, on January 10, 1904. The value of Mr. Dutton's services to the educational interests of the North End, where the greater part of his career as a teacher was passed, cannot easily be overestimated. His acquaintance with the people of that district was close and sympathetic, and his sincere interest in their welfare never failed. It can be said of him that his heart was in his work, and his kindly and judicious control of his school endeared him alike to teachers, pupils and parents. Ever alive to the needs of his "children," as he was accustomed to term his pupils, his activity in their behalf was not limited by the strict letter of the duties imposed upon him by the regulations, but extended in many directions, and often to the overtaking of his strength. One instance of this spirit will serve as an illustration: Mr. Dutton voluntarily, and without thought of recognition or compensation for several years, with the assistance of his teachers, arranged for the regular opening of his building during evenings to afford accommodations for those pupils who needed a suitable place in which to prepare their lessons for the ensuing day, and he, or one of his assistants, was always present to render such assistance and encouragement as might be needed.

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

THIRTY-SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT.

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

---

BOSTON, March, 1904.

To the School Committee :

The Committee on Accounts, in accordance with the Rules of the School Board, submit their report for the financial year 1903-1904, the detailed account of expenditures required of the Auditing Clerk being included as usual.

The appropriations for the support of the public schools are made in accordance with chapter 448 of the Legislature, Acts of 1901, which allows the School Committee to appropriate $3.40 upon each thousand dollars of the average taxable valuation of the city for the three years preceding, less abatement, which yielded $3,904,998.80.

In addition, three amounts were appropriated, as follows : Estimated income to be received during the year 1903-1904, $45,000 ; income received during the year 1902-1903 over the estimate, $6,732.04 ; and the unexpended balance at the close of the year 1902-1903, $39,895.25 ; making the sum of $3,996,626.09, which was the total amount that could be appropriated.

Under the law, forty cents only out of the rate allowed could be appropriated for new school buildings, lands, yards, and furnishings, and not less than twenty-five cents solely for repairs and alterations of school buildings.

The amount that could be expended for new buildings, viz., $459,411.62, was not appropriated.

In making up the budget for the year it soon became evident that the money available would not be sufficient to carry on the schools as then existing, and recommendations were made to the Board that, unless additional funds could be provided, certain items of expense should be either discontinued or curtailed.

These recommendations were not of choice, but of necessity, and immediate steps were taken to secure an additional appropriation from the Legislature with which to carry on the schools.

His Honor the Mayor approved, and the Legislature passed, an Act (section 1, chapter 170, of the Acts of 1903) granting $60,000 for the support of the public schools in addition to the amount previously allowed.

After the passage of this Act the School Committee appropriated, under date of April 14, 1903, the following sums for the purposes stated :

Salaries of instructors . . . . .	$2,546,000
Salaries of officers . . . . .	82,581
Salaries of janitors . . . . .	198,000
Fuel and light . . . . .	216,000
Supplies and incidentals . . . . .	197,500
Repairs and alterations of school buildings . . . . .	287,133
Rents of hired school accommodations . . . . .	50,000
Salaries and expenses of Schoolhouse Commission . . . . .	20,000
Total amount appropriated . . . . .	$3,597,214

The last two items were $2,000 and $5,000 less than the amounts asked for by the Schoolhouse Commission, and later in the year they requested that the reduction, viz., $7,000, be made good.

Before acting upon this request, and in order to determine the duty of the School Committee in appropriating the full amount asked for to meet the salaries and running expenses of the commission, this committee submitted the matter to the Corporation Counsel, and propounded to him the following questions :

No. 1. — Is it the duty of the Board of Schoolhouse Commissioners or of the School Committee to decide what the appropriation shall be for that portion of the necessary expenses of the Schoolhouse Commissioners not provided by section No. 4 of chapter 473 ?

No. 2. — Can the Schoolhouse Commissioners, under section No. 2, chapter 473, of the Acts of 1903, expend money not appropriated by the School Committee except what is derived from section No. 4 of said Act ?

No. 3. — If the Schoolhouse Commissioners estimate their necessary expenses at a certain amount, is the School Committee bound by that estimate; or has it a right to inquire into the facts and make its independent estimate of what is necessary ?

An early reply to the questions propounded will oblige the Committee on Accounts.

PHINEAS PIERCE,

The Corporation Counsel stated in his opinion: "If the School Committee does not appropriate such amount as the Schoolhouse Commission deem to be the necessary expenses, it can apply to the court to compel a greater appropriation, and the question of necessary expenses will then be settled. The two Boards must agree, or the court will have to decide what is necessary."

The Committee on Accounts gave the request of the Schoolhouse Commission careful and lengthy consideration; and being satisfied that it was reasonable, and intended only to cover the salaries of the commissioners and such necessary expenses as were contemplated under the law creating said commission, they offered the following order, which was passed by the School Committee, under date of Oct. 27, 1903:

Ordered, That the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000) be transferred from the amount appropriated under the item, "Supplies and Incidentals"—School Committee, to the item, "Salaries and necessary expenses Schoolhouse Commission"—Schoolhouse Department.

In addition, the following order was passed making an additional appropriation for rents of hired school accommodations, under the same date:

Ordered, That the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000) be transferred from the amount appropriated under the head of "Supplies and Incidentals"—School Committee, to the item, "Rents of hired school accommodations"—Schoolhouse Department.

The expenses incurred by the School Committee under the first five items of the appropriation bill, being all under their control, proved to be less in every instance than the amount appropriated.

The transfers made resulted in the appropriation for the year being sub-divided finally as follows:

Salaries of instructors . . . . .	$2,546,000 00
Salaries of officers . . . . .	82,581 00
Salaries of janitors . . . . .	198,000 00

Of the income collected, $2,934.25 were received on account of the Gibson and other funds, which amount in addition to a credit balance on hand Feb. 1, 1904, of $4,576.41, was available for and limited to expenditures under the provisions of these funds.

The balance, $45,028.57 (less the amount estimated at the beginning of the year, $45,000) has been carried forward, and is included in the amount that the School Committee can appropriate and expend for general purposes during the year 1904-1905.

The net ordinary expenses, compared with those for 1902-1903 show an increase of $191,409.83.

The average number of pupils belonging to the different grades the past year was 99,133. The average cost per pupil amounted to $35.41, an increase, as compared with that for the previous year, of forty-three cents per pupil.

The gross expenses compared with those for 1902-1903 show a variation in the different items of the appropriation as follows :

Salaries of instructors increased . . . . .	$102,327 34
Salaries of janitors increased . . . . .	6,410 51
Salaries of officers increased . . . . .	1,515 61
Fuel and light increased . . . . .	118,268 76

Supplies and incidentals decreased . . . . .	36,149 10
Total increase, gross . . . . .	$192,373 12

The following shows the variation in the number of pupils and in salaries in the different grades for the past year, compared with 1902-1903 :

Grammar Schools, pupils increased 1,098, salaries increased,	26,910 11

Spectacle Island and special classes, pupils increased, 17.
Total increase in pupils, 4,262 ; in salaries . . . . .	$102,327 34

The number of instructors, including 13 teachers on half pay, on the pay-rolls Jan. 1, 1904, was 2,147, divided among the several grades of schools as follows: High Schools, 224; Grammar Schools, 973; Primary Schools, 701; Horace Mann School, 15; Kindergartens, 176; Manual Training, including Cookery, 58, making an increase of 40 instructors since Jan. 1, 1903.

In addition there have been 76 temporary teachers and 185 special assistants employed in the day schools, an average of 301 instructors in the Evening and Evening Drawing Schools, and 123 special instructors, including 47 teachers of sewing, making a total of 2,832 instructors on the pay-rolls during the year.

The cost for salaries of instructors the past year was $2,529,177.79 an increase as compared with 1902-03 of $102,327.34.

Although this increase is larger in proportion than the average yearly increase in money allowed under the law for school purposes, still it shows a gratifying decrease from the cost for the previous year, when the increase from 1901-02 to 1902-03 was $133,074.09.

It is hoped that the increase in this item from year to year may be kept within an amount that will correspond more nearly to the yearly increase in the appropriation, which will depend upon the growing valuation of the city, and will average in the neighborhood of $85,000 for the five items in the appropriation bill under the charge of the School Committee.

In 1876-77 the expenditures for salaries of instructors was $1,211,796.67. In 1893-94 it had increased to $1,470,051.03, showing an average annual increase for the seventeen years of $15,191. This amount was much less than might have been expected to meet the salaries paid additional teachers required by the increase in the yearly number of pupils.

In 1894 a change was made in the rules whereby teachers when appointed were allowed certain credits for previous service rendered, and, in consequence, the average annual increase was more than doubled during the next two years.

In September, 1896, the present schedule of salaries went into effect and largely increased salaries, but spreading the increase occasioned by the schedule over a number of years.

The great body of instructors, including grammar and primary assistants, kindergarten teachers and teachers of cookery, reached the maximum (under the schedule of 1896) September 1, 1899, and it was expected that after these teachers had received the maximum salary for a full year the total cost would resume a normal condition, but this was offset by the appointment of a large number of special teachers for commercial branches and other studies.

The introduction of vacation schools, educational centres, and evening lectures, and the reduction in the number of pupils to a teacher, all combined to keep up the large annual increase in salaries of instructors after the provisions of the salary schedule of 1896 ceased to have much effect upon the matter.

In 1893-94 the teachers of sewing numbered 31. They taught 271 divisions at a cost of $18,775.28.

The past year 47 teachers were employed, who taught 474 divisions at an expense of $37,020.11, showing that the cost for this branch of instruction in grammar schools has nearly doubled in ten years.

The desire to give teachers as many divisions as possible has led without doubt in some instances to the extension of sewing in the upper classes, and the tendency to reduce the number of pupils to an instructor has helped also to increase the cost within the ten years mentioned.

On account of the great difference between the minimum and maximum salaries paid the main body of instructors, the cost each year depends somewhat upon the number of resignations and removals by death.

For example, if a master in a high school resigns and the vacancy is filled by a junior-master on the minimum salary, the difference in favor of the School Committee during the course of eleven years amounts to $9,504 by this one change. The difference during eight years in the case of a grammar or primary assistant, between the maximum and minimum salary would amount to $1,728.

It is no exaggeration to state that the expenses of the School Committee are lessened about $1,000 on the average by the resignation of each instructor on the maximum salary.

November 13, 1883, the School Committee passed an order requesting the City Council to appropriate the sum of $2,500 for the equipment and maintenance of a manual training school, which amount was granted.

Rooms in the basement of the Public Latin school building were fitted up for the purpose, and instruction was given in the use of hand tools.

From this small beginning the work has been extended until during the past year the city supported thirty-seven schools of carpentry for boys and thirty schools of cookery for girls.

The expenses of these schools the past year amounted to $75,609.42.

Instruction in sewing taught by forty-seven special teachers in the grammar schools, and charged to the expenditures for grammar schools, might also be included under the head of manual training and likewise instruction in the use of tools as carried on in the Mechanic Arts High School, the cost for which is included in high school expenses.

Manual training as carried on by the City of Boston during the past twenty years has added over $500,000 to the expenses of the School Committee.

In compliance with the rules, 2,327 cases of absence were reported by the principals on the monthly pay-rolls, varying in time from a half day to the entire month.

The amount deducted from the teachers' salaries in accordance was $30,523.59 which was about one half of the salaries of the regular instructors for the time absent.

It requires about $2,500,000 to pay the yearly salaries. The time absent by teachers according to the salaries paid would call for about $60,000, or about two and one-half per cent. of the total amount paid; and two and one-half per cent. of school time would amount to between four and five days, which might fairly be considered the average absence of each instructor.

The number of substitutes employed the past year in place of absent teachers was 1,345, who received from the city for their services $22,095.85.

Up to within a few years all regular teachers received their full salaries during absence; and if a substitute were employed the compensation was a matter of adjustment between teacher and substitute.

During the past year, under the change in the rules, the difference in favor of the city on account of deductions from absent teachers and payments to substitutes was $8,427.74 as compared with $7,571.54 the previous year.

January and March contribute the most to the list of absent teachers, showing nearly twenty-five per cent. of the total, while June and September show only about thirteen per cent. probably owing to the schools being closed part of each month.

The cost per pupil for salaries paid instructors in the Normal, Latin, and High Schools, the past year, was as follows:

Normal School . . . .	$99 69	Girls' High School . . .	$54 85
Latin School . . . .	100 61	Mechanic Arts High
Girls' Latin School . . .	58 63	School . . . . .	73 53

East Boston High School,	58 45	West Roxbury High
English High School . .	91 69	School . . . . .	68 10
Average cost . . . .		$69 10

The cost per pupil for salaries of instructors in the several high schools varies widely, from $110.15 in the Charlestown High School to $42.85 in the Dorchester High School, less than one-half.

The fact of so marked a difference in the average cost for the same kind and amount of instruction seems to this committee worthy of consideration.

For many years the city supported one evening high school on Montgomery street, with branches in East Boston and Charlestown.

At the beginning of the term the branches were made independent schools, and, in addition, schools were established in Roxbury and South Boston, making five separate evening high schools supported by the city since Sept. 28, 1903.

An additional evening elementary school was opened in the Moon-street school, being an overflow of the Eliot Evening School, making fifteen in all, situated in different parts of the city.

Cookery, sewing, and woodworking are being added gradually to the evening school course, and perhaps in no one year since evening schools were established have such rapid strides been made in these directions as during the past year.

Salaries of instructors in evening schools, not including the evening drawing schools, amounted to $78,153.50 for the year, an increase of $6,528 as compared with the year preceding.

Salaries paid in the six evening drawing schools, including a school of design, for the usual term, amounted to $14,002 as compared with $14,035 for the previous year.

---

The expense the past year for the care of school buildings, including the washing of floors during the summer vacation, amounted to $196,947.44, an increase over 1902-03 of $6,410.51.

The increase was about three per cent., and only kept pace with the increased accommodations required by additional pupils.

The number of buildings (including portable) used for school purposes for which compensation was paid was 306, and required a force of 203 persons classed as janitors, engineers, matrons, or substitute janitors.

Several of the janitors are in charge of two or more buildings, while in a few buildings two, and in one building three persons are employed to do the work.

The average salary paid to each person in the janitor service was $970.04, but as many are obliged to employ assistance, the net average amount received was less than this sum.

Including the Girls' Latin School branch in Copley square, eleven buildings are used for high schools, and the care of these, exclusive of evening school work, will average about $3,000 each annually.

The grammar and primary school buildings now being erected will cost much more for care than the older buildings. The latest one acquired, the William E. Russell School, requires an annual salary of $1,836, and, although a very commodious building, will cost, in proportion to the number of pupils accommodated, nearly fifty per cent. more than the older grammar buildings.

For several years some of the janitors have claimed that much inequality existed in the salaries paid in comparison with work required, and for a long time various committees of the School Board have endeavored to equalize matters.

Upon the recommendation of the Committee on Salaries the School Committee have adopted recently a new schedule of salaries of janitors, based upon measurements, which will bring about a fairer adjustment, and it is hoped will remove all just cause for complaint.

During the past year the Committee on Supplies presented for approval bills to the amount of $381,727.51 which represents the total expenditures of the School Committee, exclusive of salaries, repairs, and the building of new school-houses. The income amounted to $3,030.28, leaving the sum of $378,697.23 as the net amount expended under their direction. There were purchased for the schools 25,291 tons of coal and 565 cords of wood, which, together with the expense for electric power, gas and electric lighting, amounted to $214,663.37. This is included in the preceding net amount.

Full particulars regarding the method and cost of supplying the schools are given in the report of the Committee on Supplies, lately presented.

The appropriation made for repairs and alterations upon school buildings, including also the expenses of the School-house Commission and payments for rents, amounted to $364,133. The expenditures during the year were $364,133. For details, see pages 56 and 57 of this report.

Of the amount appropriated $52,000 were set apart for the payment of rents and taxes.

From this table it will be seen that for the financial year just closed the running expenses, exclusive of repairs, etc., were sixty-two cents more per pupil than for the year previous.

In the following table the total expenditure, exclusive of repairs and new buildings, is divided into the five items of the appropriation, under the charge of the School Committee, showing the net amount expended for each during the past twenty-seven years and nine months :

The average annual increase in pupils during the time covered by the preceding table was 1,808, which should enter into the account in comparing expenses.

The foregoing tables include all the running expenses of the schools, and form the basis for computing the rate per pupil. The total running expenses, compared with those for 1902-03, show an increase of forty-three cents in the rate per pupil.

Later in this report the expenses of each grade of schools are given, but include only such as were chargeable directly to the different grades. In addition, certain expenditures which might be termed general expenses, such as cost of supervision, salaries of officers and directors of special studies, manual training expenses, printing, and similar expenditures, amounting to $325,380.27, or about ten per cent. of the running expenses, were incurred for the schools as a whole.

In like manner, a certain part of the income collected, amounting to $24,200.05, was received for the schools in general, and not for any particular grade.

The different grades of schools have been charged with the general expenses, and credited with the income received on account of the schools as a whole, as follows :

The amount collected from non-resident pupils attending our schools the past year (exclusive of pupils in the Horace Mann School, whose tuition is paid partly by the State) was $5,779.66, which was somewhat less than the average amount received for the past few years.

In September and February of each year blanks are sent to the principals for the return of all non-resident pupils under their charge.

Although the instructions issued state explicitly that no non-resident pupil shall be allowed to enter school unless a pledge for payment of tuition has been signed by either the parent or guardian, there is reason to believe that some pupils succeed in gaining admission for whom tuition is not exacted.

The tuition collected last year on account of 216 pupils was sub-divided as follows :

78 Normal, Latin, and High School pupils . . . . .	$5,602 96
7 Grammar School pupils . . . . .	176 70

Gibson School Fund. — This is a bequest of Christopher Gibson, who, about the year 1674, left twenty-six acres of land to certain trustees and their descendants for the benefit of the schools of learning in the Town of Dorchester.

This land, with the exception of 74,600 square feet, has been sold from time to time and the proceeds invested as follows :

City of Boston 6 % bonds, $1,000 00	City of Boston 3½% bonds, $52,700 00
“ “ 5 % “ 6,000 00	“ “ 3 % “ 7,700 00
“ “ 4 % “ 5,925 00

Cash awaiting investment, $15.43.

Income on hand January 31, 1904, $3,798.53.

The income from this fund amounts to about $2,700 per annum, and is expended for the benefit of the schools in Dorchester and South Boston, and limited to purchases of an educational character. The amount expended during the year on account of this and other similar funds was $3,812.27.

Under the head of new school-houses the city has expended in thirty years the sum of $12,908,509.78, or an average amount each year of $430,283.66.

From 1874-75 to 1884-85 the amount expended was $2,012,376.50, a yearly average of $201,237.65; from 1884-85 to 1894-95 the expenditure was $2,914,415.88, a yearly average of $291,441.59, and from 1894-95 to 1904-05 the expenditure was $7,981,717.40, a yearly average of $798,171.74, showing that the cost for new school-houses the past ten years has been more than sixty per cent. greater than for the previous twenty years.

The increase in the number of pupils covering the same period was as follows: 1873-74 to 1883-84, 14,530; 1883-84 to 1893-94, 12,707; 1893-94 to 1903-04, 27,638, which indicates that the great increase in the cost for new school-houses was not caused wholly by a corresponding increase in the number of pupils.

The city is paying now nearly twice as much for the housing of a pupil as was paid thirty years ago. At that time the accommodation of a pupil consisted of a desk in one room, but in these days, owing to the extended course of study, pupils are provided with additional accommodations in other rooms for manual training, sewing, and cookery.

Much better accommodations are provided also for principals and teachers, and rooms are set apart for their exclusive use.

To provide for the same number of pupils requires probably fifty per cent. more area than was needed thirty years ago.

Previous to 1898, in which year the Legislature authorized a definite amount out of the tax levy for school expenditures, it was the duty of this committee to make up estimates of the amount that, in their opinion, would be needed to carry on the schools.

These estimates, after being passed upon by the School Board, were sent to the City Auditor, for consideration by the City Council. The Council rarely allowed the full amount requested, but always made good the deficiency at the end of the year.

Under the present plan, which allows a fixed amount, the needs of the schools may call for a less or a greater amount than that allowed by law; if less, liberal estimates are made, but if more, some branch of the service must be curtailed.

For the present year, a conservative estimate of the needs of the schools calls for $24,000 more than the limit fixed by law will permit.

It would seem an easy matter to save the comparatively small sum of $24,000 out of an expenditure of about $3,500,000 ; but when it is understood that salaries of instructors, officers, and janitors are so fixed as to admit of very little leeway and call for nearly ninety per cent. of the appropriation, the difficulty of saving even that amount out of the estimates becomes apparent. Only an unusual number of resignations or removals by death would have any appreciable effect.

Supplies and incidentals can be reduced to some extent, but there is a point in limiting the schools in the matter of material beyond which it is not the best economy to go.

The cost of coal is at present an uncertain factor, and may have a serious effect upon running expenses for the year, for, while there may be some reduction in price, the amount needed cannot very well be other than increased.

The new schedule of salaries for janitors, together with the annual increase in school accommodations, will add about $15,000 to the cost of this item.

The fact should be borne in mind that unless the Legislature grants more money the School Committee will be limited in their expenditures throughout the year to an increase of only $64,582.44 over the amount expended last year ; and, in order to keep within this amount, it will be necessary to make every possible effort to curtail expenses.

Your committee invite attention to the following pages of this report, which give in detail the expenditures for the financial year 1903-1904.

GROWTH AND FINANCIAL NEEDS.

The growth of the school system may best be measured for practical purposes by noting the increase in the number of pupils belonging to all the day schools. The evening schools and educational centres need not be included, because they do not raise the demand for additional school-rooms; and the other special schools are too small, relatively, to make any noticeable difference.

At the end of the last half-year, January 31, 1904, the whole number of pupils belonging to all the regular day schools was 88,753, which number is greater than the corresponding number for 1903 by 1,956. This increase is less than the average increase during the last four years, which has been 2,007.

The average number of pupils belonging to all the regular day schools during the half-year ended January 31, 1904, was 89,037, which is greater than the corresponding number for the previous year by 2,057. This increase is less than the average increase during the last four years, which has been 2,182.

It has been proved by the experience of past years, as fully set forth in former reports,* that the cost of land and new school-houses required for the accommodation of a permanent increase in the number of pupils belonging is not less than $250 for each additional pupil. Therefore a conservative estimate of the cost of providing for the past year's growth, which is undoubtedly a permanent increase, cannot be less than half a million dollars.

This result is substantially the same as that reported one year ago as a consequence of the growth of the schools during the year 1902. And it is highly probable that the same result will follow one year hence as a consequence of the expected growth during the year 1904. The fact is clearly apparent that the needs of the schools in the matter of land and new buildings have been and are accumulating at the rate of half a million dollars a year. This accumulation of needs has already amounted to no less than a million dollars since January, 1902, and it will, in all probability, amount to a million and a half by January, 1905.

Now, how have these accumulating needs been met—for they have been met, partially at least—during the last two years? And how are they going to be met during the current year 1904? They might have been met by tax levies in 1902 and in 1903, since the rate of forty cents on a thousand dollars of the valuation, permitted by law, would have produced nearly half a million in each of those years. But the opinion prevailed that it was inexpedient to raise the money by tax levies. The alternative, of course, was to use borrowed money. The borrowed money actually used was an undefined part of the money that had been raised by loans authorized to cover the older needs that had accumulated and had been officially recognized as existing prior to January, 1902. Just how large a part of the money already borrowed and appropriated has been applied to recently accruing needs, and how much to older needs, cannot now be stated accurately, because in several instances the two classes of needs have been joined together and covered by the same building projects.

For example, it was thought that the needs existing at the West End in January, 1902, would be covered by a school-house of twenty to twenty-four rooms. But by the time the architects had drawn their plans for a building of twenty-four rooms, the needs of the district had so far increased as to call for at least thirty rooms. Accordingly, the architects were ordered to put another story on their building, thus providing thirty-two rooms and increasing the cost correspondingly. The building is still incomplete, and will not be finished for some months to come; and even when finished it will be found inadequate for the needs that will then exist.

Several other examples of building projects enlarged in like manner to cover recently accruing needs could be cited. Undoubtedly, this enlargement of building projects has been dictated in every instance by a wise foresight. But the result is that a large part of the money intended to cover certain needs that were recognized as existing prior to January, 1902, has virtually been used to cover needs that have been recognized since that date, thus leaving a corresponding amount of the older needs uncovered.

This, therefore, is the situation. To the four million dollars representing the older needs must now be added one million more to represent the needs that have accrued in the last two years; and this sum must be further increased by half a million to represent the needs accruing this year, assuming that the tax of forty cents on a thousand dollars is not to be levied this year. We thus obtain a total of five and a half million dollars to represent the total needs, both old and new, up to January, 1905. From this total must be deducted the needs, both old and new, indistinguishably mixed together, which have been cancelled by the million dollars borrowed in 1902, and the million and a half borrowed in 1903, and which will be cancelled by the million and a half that may be borrowed in 1904. These deductions will exhaust the borrowing capacity of the city for school purposes under existing laws. We shall come, therefore, to January, 1905, with accrued needs for land and school-houses represented by a million and a half dollars—all unprovided for. In other words, Boston will then be three years behind in the matter of housing the school children.

Substantially this same result has been reached by the Schoolhouse Commissioners, who have followed a wholly different course of reasoning. The needs recognized as existing prior to January, 1902, were stated in detail by the Commissioners in their report submitted to the School Committee on December 18, 1901. The list of needs therein given consists of forty-two items. Of these forty-two items, seventeen have been or will be taken care of by the loans already available, and amounting to two and a half million dollars. The remaining twenty-five items will require, as the Commissioners estimate, nearly three millions ($2,829,300); from which may be deducted the loan of a million and a half that may become available this year, leaving a balance of nearly a million and a half that will be needed after the borrowing capacity of the city for school purposes shall have been exhausted.

We have, therefore, these two independently derived results, the first deduced from the relation that exists between the annual increase in the number of pupils and the annual expenditure necessitated by that increase, while the second is obtained by estimating the cost of the remaining items on the list of forty-two, each item being enlarged whenever necessary to cover recently accrued needs. The close agreement of these two independent results is a strong confirmation of each by the other. See, also, for a further confirmation, page 44.

Therefore the situation as it may be expected to exist in January, 1905, appears as follows :

Land and new buildings needed in January, 1902, then estimated to cost . . . . .	$4,000,000
Additional needs caused by growth during the three years 1902, 1903, and 1904 . . . . .	1,500,000
Total . . . . .	$5,500,000
Covered by loans—
in 1902 . . . . .	$1,000,000
in 1903 . . . . .	1,000,000
in 1903 (additional) . . . . .	500,000
in 1904 (expected) . . . . .	1,500,000
	4,000,000
Leaving unprovided for in January, 1905 . . . . .	$1,500,000

THE HOUSING OF PUPILS.

Soon after the opening of schools in September, 1903, inquiry was made as to the actual housing of the pupils, and the facts reported were as follows :

Total number of pupils in the day schools . . . . .	89,178
Of these there were — in regular school rooms . . . . .	77,710
in halls, corridors, basements, etc., of school-houses owned by the city . . . . .	2,320
in temporary or "portable" buildings . . . . .	5,469
in rented rooms . . . . .	3,679
	89,178

And there were 387 children waiting for admission. These, however, were soon provided for.

Of the 11,468 children placed in other than regular school-rooms owned by the city, there were, in September, 1903:

Lstin and High School pupils . . . . .	377
Grammar, Primary, and Kindergarten pupils living in East Boston . . . . .	663
Charlestown . . . . .	293
North End . . . . .	1,007
West End . . . . .	1,282
Central City . . . . .	181
South End . . . . .	591
South Boston . . . . .	773
Roxbury . . . . .	2,400
Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury . . . . .	1,045
Brighton . . . . .	575
Dorchester . . . . .	2,281

To place these 11,468 children in new school-houses, built by the city, would cost, at $250 per capita, $2,867,000, a sum which comes remarkably close to the Schoolhouse Commissioners' estimate of the cost of finishing the forty-two items. See page 43.

Since September, the situation has been somewhat relieved by the opening of new buildings. No children have been allowed to wait long for admission to school, for hired rooms have been procured soon after the need of them appeared.

New buildings opened for use since September 1, 1903, are the following:

Marshall Primary School, Christopher Gibson District, Westville street, Dorchester, September 28, 1903.

William E. Russell Grammar School, Columbia road, Dorchester, October 27, 1903.

Farragut Primary School, Martin District, Kenwood road, Roxbury, January 18, 1904.

Total rentals paid by the city.....		$47,852

These hired buildings are occupied by 3,679 day-school pupils. Setting aside the evening schools, the total rental paid by the city is $45,552. This sum is the interest at 3 per cent. on $1,518,400.

But to house those same pupils in the new buildings at $250 per capita would cost the city only $919,750, the interest on which is $27,592. Therefore, by borrowing the money and building the new school-houses, the city would save the difference between rentals and interest, which amounts to $17,960 annually.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

This year marks a noteworthy epoch in the development of evening schools. An historical sketch of this highly useful part of the school system was given in my report of last year. This year new schools have been added and the course of studies has been enlarged. A new elementary evening school has been opened in Moon street to relieve the overcrowded Eliot Evening School. The Lyman Evening School is no longer joined with the Branch Evening High School under one principal, but has been separately organized under its own principal.

The Evening High School, which has hitherto consisted of one central school and two branches, one in Charlestown and one in East Boston, has been deprived of its branches, and the latter have been set up as independent schools. Also two new evening high schools have been opened, one in South Boston and one in Roxbury. These five schools have flourished in different degrees, but each has amply justified the time and the money bestowed upon it.

The experience of this season would seem to leave no doubt that an evening high school ought to be opened in Dorchester next season. And it seems probable that West Roxbury and Brighton would each support an evening high school if the local needs were properly studied and public sentiment were appealed to the right way.

The effect of opening the local evening high schools has been to increase very largely, in fact, almost to double, the total number of persons taking evening high school instruction. This is because there are many pupils in the local schools who would never have registered in the Central Evening High School. Were this not true, the registration in the Central High School would have fallen off by an amount equal or nearly equal to the total registration in South Boston and Roxbury High Schools together. But no such thing has happened. While the Central school has nearly held its own, losing less than 500 on its registration, the combined registration of the two new schools has been over 2,500. The facts are shown in the following tables:

The scope of the instruction offered in the evening high schools has been enlarged by the addition of Drawing, Music (including choral practice and study of harmony), Gymnastics and Applied Physiology (Nursing). Also classes have been formed to prepare for civil service examinations. Classes in Mercantile Law, in Commercial Geography, and in the Spanish language have for the first time this year attracted considerable attention.

The drawing, it may be said, should be taught in the regular evening drawing schools; but in reply it may be urged that there have been found people in considerable numbers who find it convenient and desirable to add drawing to their other studies in the evening high school, and who do not desire to enter the evening drawing schools and devote their whole time to drawing. To the city it can make no difference whether drawing is taught here or there. The true and liberal policy is to provide that drawing may be taught wherever a class of interested pupils can be gathered together.

The singing classes in the evening schools as well as those in the educational centres have accomplished good results for the present, and give promise of much larger usefulness in the future. It has become clear that there are great possibilities to be realized through evening instruction in music. Not only can large classes for chorus work be carried on with well-sustained interest and enthusiasm, but classes in harmony and counterpoint, at least in the elementary stages of those studies, can be maintained. So much has been proved, and more could be suggested for future experience to establish. It is only a question, now, of securing the best musical teaching ability for the purpose; and this suggests the importance of providing adequate compensation for the most competent teachers.

Now that harmony and counterpoint have been recognized as subjects to be counted towards admission to college, and more advanced courses in those subjects are given in college to be counted towards a degree, we may well regard music as worthy of that serious attention which is bestowed on the languages, mathematics, or science. Indeed, the time has come for making a definite recommendation that advanced instruction in music be provided in the high schools, both day and evening, so far as to prepare young people possessed of the requisite native talent to meet the modern opportunities and requirements in music.

One such opportunity has been alluded to — that of offering music as an examination subject for admission to college. The boys and the girls in the two Latin schools ought, therefore, to be provided with such instruction in music as will enable those who wish to do so to take advantage of this opportunity. And while there may be delay and difficulty in providing such instruction in the two day schools named, it is easily conceivable that the pupils who wished it might receive the instruction in the evening high schools.

But there are many other opportunities for pleasurable or profitable employment which can be opened to our young people through more advanced musical studies. Heretofore the public schools have done but little more than to teach singing — and this of the easier and simpler kind. Easy chorus work marks the highest attainment of the grammar and high school pupils. In the Normal School the pupils merely study some of the best methods of teaching singing to young children in the lower grades. Hereafter, it may be expected, the public schools will open much higher ranges of instruction and acquirement in music to the young people who wish to enter upon them. What has been done, therefore, in the study of harmony this year at the evening high schools may be regarded as an auspicious beginning—but still only a beginning—of the coming higher instruction in the science of music.

In gymnastics, the evening high schools have taken the obvious step suggested by the existence of a well equipped gymnasium in each high school building. The classes have afforded good systematic physical exercise to many people in the only part of the day when they are free to take it.

Among the people thus free in the evening only, certain pupils of the day high schools would be glad to count themselves, and I see no good reason why they should not be permitted to do so, save that a regulation stands in the way. But the reason of the regulation hardly applies in this case. The regulation was intended, doubtless, to prevent young people from studying in both day and evening schools at the same time; for the reason that injurious over-study might result if the practice were allowed. This reason, however, has no application to the case of a day school pupil who wishes to take gymnastics in the evening. Nor would this reason seem to apply to the case of day school pupils who might wish to join the evening singing classes. It would seem well, therefore, to suggest that the regulation referred to be modified so as to permit day school pupils to join classes in gymnastics and in singing at the evening high schools.

But the reason of this regulation does apply to the cases of day school pupils who wish to take up studies in the evening that require a more strenuous mental effort. Cases of this kind—a considerable number of them—have come to my knowledge this year. In one instance, some young people who were at the time pupils in a day high school were admitted to an evening high school, inadvertently it may be supposed, but nevertheless in violation of the regulation. The proper remedy was applied in these cases as soon as they were discovered. To prevent the recurrence of such mistakes, the teachers placed in charge of registration at the evening schools should use the utmost care.

Another most interesting development of the possibilities of evening high school instruction has been witnessed in Charlestown. The practical application of physiology and hygiene to the business of nursing has there been taught with remarkable success. A large class of young women, some of whom came from distant parts of the city, has been taught by Dr. Laura A. C. Hughes, assisted by Miss Jennie Dix, both of whom are graduates of the Boston City Hospital Training School for Nurses, and have had large experience in nursing and in directing other nurses.

This class, on the 10th of March, gave a demonstration of their acquirements before a large and much pleased audience. The members of the class, dressed in nurse's gowns, caps, and aprons, appeared on the platform, where they made beds for patients, carried helpless patients in chairs, lifted them into bed, undressed them under the bedclothes, and gave them a bath; changed the beds without removing the patients, moved them on the draw sheet, lifted them from one bed to another on a sheet, took and recorded their temperature, pulse, and respiration. Two girls had volunteered their services as patients for all these operations, and seemed to enjoy their treatment. Then the best method of washing and dressing babies was shown by a direct application to two live babies brought in for the purpose. The making and applying of poultices, fomentations, bandages of many kinds, and slings were fully demonstrated. The preparation of nurse and patient for aseptic surgery was actually made by some of the pupils, after which the exercises were concluded by brief illustrations of the methods of giving medicine, restoring respiration, and using the tourniquet.

All this work is simple and elementary, as it needs must be for mere beginners, and it is far from making the members of the class trained nurses; but on the other hand it has made them useful attendants in the less serious kinds of illness, and has given them excellent practical knowledge, based on the latest results of science, which they can carry into many homes beside their own. Such is the result of the first season's experiment. Another year there may be offered advanced as well as elementary instruction in nursing. It would greatly promote the welfare of the people if every future mother should be required to take a practical course of instruction in nursing. Their sick children would suffer less, and be less likely to die.

A highly important step forward was taken recently when it was decided by the committees in charge to open the Mechanic Arts High School for evening instruction next season. Notwithstanding the inconveniences that may be expected to arise from the overcrowded condition of the day school, and from the disturbances incidental to the proposed enlargement of the building, it was believed that the offer of evening instruction in the mechanic arts ought no longer to be delayed.

EVENING ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

The growth of the elementary evening schools may be seen by comparing the numbers given below to show the total registration and the average attendance for this and the last two seasons.

SEASON.	Total Registration.	Average Attendance.
1901-02.....	7,854	2,399
1902-03.....	8,932	2,557
1903-04.....	9,430	2,762

In relation to these schools have arisen some questions of administration which need to be considered and settled.

One such question relates to the employment of interpreters. Classes of adults, unable to read or write and but imperfectly to speak the English language, are found in most of the elementary evening schools. It is claimed that the objective method of teaching language, which has been entirely successful in the hands of skilful teachers with the children of recently-arrived immigrants, fails with adult immigrants; that the teacher ought to be familiar with the native language of his pupils, whether it be the Italian, Yiddish, Greek, Armenian, Syrian, Lithuanian, or any other foreign tongue, so that he may be able to explain English words and idioms in terms already familiar to the pupils; and that teachers of the same race or nationality as the pupils can better sustain the interest of classes in their work. From these claims the conclusion is drawn that the English language should be taught to a class of Italians by an Italian, to Greeks by a Greek, to Syrians by a Syrian, to Russian Jews by a Russian Jew, and so on.

But these claims cannot be admitted without more thorough and scientific tests than have yet been applied to them. It is true that the objective method of teaching language has broken down in the hands of some inexperienced teachers; but this only proves that the adult classes require teachers of special skill and experience. Such teachers have been found; but unfortunately not so many of them as have been needed.

Measures should be taken without delay to train some of our young teachers for this special work; and, when so trained, they should be permitted and encouraged to continue in the work for some years. As things now go, the young graduate of the Normal School no sooner begins to be skilful in evening school work than she must leave it to enter the day school. Now, if her acquired skill happened to be specially in the line of teaching the English language to adult foreigners, there would be an important advantage gained if arrangements were made whereby she could continue her evening work for some years after her entering the day school service. For example, she might be given a competent substitute for the afternoon whenever she taught an evening class the same day. Therefore, whatever force there may be in the first claim, it can and ought to be met by managing so that only teachers of competent skill should be permitted to apply the objective method of language teaching to classes of adult foreigners.

As to the second claim, we may say that the question whether the teacher should use the native language of the pupil for the interpretation of the language taught will be answered differently in different circumstances. The question in its relation to the present discussion is hardly a practical one, inasmuch as few of the teachers who seek appointment on the ground of their familiarity with the foreign language of the pupils have enough knowledge of English to be even tolerable as teachers of that language. Rarely does a foreigner, unless he be highly educated, become so well versed in English as to be a competent teacher of that language to classes of his own nationality.

It is true that the teacher who is ignorant of the native language of the pupils is cut off from one means of overcoming the occasional inconveniences that arise in the use of the objective method; but, on the other hand, it should not be overlooked that the advantages of the objective method are sacrificed in proportion as resort is made to the method of translation.

The third claim, that teachers of the same race or nationality as the pupils can better sustain the interest of the classes, has some apparent justification in experience. There have been cases in which the departure of such a teacher from the school was followed at once by the departure of his whole class of fellow-countrymen. There have been petitions, each signed by many persons all of one nationality, asking for the appointment of a compatriot as teacher and pledging the petitioners to regular attendance on condition that the teacher of their choice be appointed. In such cases the interest displayed is apparently something different from the legitimate interest in self-improvement which the evening schools aim to promote.

There remain, however, cases in which a legitimate interest in self-improvement has been awakened and sustained among recent immigrants by selecting competent persons of their race to act, not as teachers, but as interpreters. An interpreter can assist the regular teacher in many ways. He can smooth away some of the difficulties that beset beginners under a teacher whose language is but little known to them. The interpreter can help in the general management of the class and school by explaining to the pupils in their native tongue the directions of the teacher, the regulations of the school, the conduct expected of them, and the purpose of their being in school. Therefore it may be admitted that the presence of one interpreter for each foreign language represented in the school is desirable.

But this admission is limited to the case stated, and cannot be pressed to the extent of allowing the whole claim under consideration. The teaching must be kept in the hands of competent teachers, not entrusted to inexperienced foreigners for the mere sake of drawing into school larger numbers of their fellow countrymen, nor for charity's sake. This drawing into school is a desirable thing to have done, but it should be made a function of the interpreters. If a teacher cannot hold his classes by good teaching he should not be permitted to rely on his nationality.

Another question in the administration of evening schools relates to the employment therein of day school teachers. And the importance of this question has been emphasized by recent experience in the educational centres. The question is also a difficult one.

The existing regulations forbid the employment of women in day and evening schools at same time, but permit such employment of men, provided they are not principals of day schools.

These regulations have a history, and their present shape is the outcome of successive adjustments to changing conditions. There was a time when the aim was to supply the evening schools with teachers wholly from outside the teaching force of the day schools. It was believed that young men studying for the professions or in the earlier years of professional practice could be found in sufficient numbers to supply all the evening schools with competent principals and male teachers; and it is possible, had this belief been held persistently, that the day schools would never have been drawn upon for male teachers.

But the belief was changed, either because there were not enough young professional men to be found, or because it became apparent that persons with whom teaching was a regular and permanent occupation were better teachers than were those with whom teaching was only a temporary side occupation. However this may have been, the change came; and a large number of the male teachers in the day schools, including many of the masters, were admitted to the evening school service.

The state of things thus produced lasted for some years, and then a reaction set in which resulted in the compromise embodied in the present regulation.

This year there have been 20 men employed as principals of evening schools, of whom 13 are teachers in the day schools of this city, and 7 are not. There have been also 144 men employed as assistants in evening schools, chiefly in the evening high schools, of whom 57 are teachers in the day schools of this city, and 87 are not.

The principalships of evening schools offer to junior masters in the day high schools and to sub-masters in grammar schools excellent opportunities for the development and exercise of their executive powers. In the day schools they are mostly cut off from such opportunities, being under the direction of their principals; but in the evening schools they have free range and full responsibility. Such experience is doubtless useful to those who are in the line of promotion to the principalship in day schools.

But there are excellent men who do not seek these opportunities for improving or displaying their executive powers. They believe, and some by trial have learned, that their work in the day schools draws quite heavily enough on their daily supply of vital energy; that their intellectual life is in danger of being narrowed or deadened by too much merely executive work; and that the best use to make of out-of-school time is not in keeping another school, but in study and observation for the increase of one's general scholarship or professional knowledge. And who will say these men are not right? Certainly the teacher who stops studying under the idea that he already has knowledge enough will soon show that he has not.

Opposed considerations like those just indicated have led the Board of Supervisors to advise that the employment of men day school teachers in evening schools should be limited in some way; as, for example, by permitting such employment for only three or four consecutive years, or for only a certain number of years in a given period, say for only three years out of every five. This plan would open the opportunities of the evening school service to a larger number of men in the day schools, some of whom would do well to improve the chance; but, on the other hand, would have the effect of preventing over-indulgence in evening school work, of which there have been and may still be examples.

My own opinion is, that any young man in the day school service, aiming to prepare himself through wider experience for larger usefulness, does well to take service in the evening schools for a few years; but that he does not do well to prolong this service many years; and I should therefore favor some such limits as those above suggested.

The present regulation, in its application to women, has been narrowed by interpretation so as to apply only to women who are permanently employed in the day schools. This interpretation opens the evening school service to temporary teachers, substitutes, and special assistants already in the day school service. These, together with a few teachers not otherwise employed, constitute the body of assistants in the elementary evening schools. In the evening high schools the employment of women has not been favored, even if the women in view were not already employed in the day school service.

The soundness of the interpretation above mentioned has been questioned, and it certainly appears to be questionable; for the terms of the regulation are absolute and afford no ground for making exceptions for any women employed in any way in day schools. Nevertheless exceptions have been made from year to year for a long time, until the practice of making them has grown to be a settled custom. I had myself been following this custom some years when it was pointed out to me last October that I was acting in violation of the regulation. And so by strict construction I was. When it was further pointed out that some unfairness in the distribution of appointments among the graduates of the Normal School had resulted from my following the custom instead of the regulation, I undertook to mend matters by adopting the strict construction. This step caused consternation among the principals of the evening schools, and would have wrought havoc in the schools had I persisted. So I did not persist. But I think the regulation ought to be amended so as to sanction the custom.

There is another amendment to the regulation which might well be made. It is the custom now for a woman teacher in an evening school to vacate her place at once upon receiving a permanent appointment in a day school. The effect of this is apt to be bad on the class she leaves in the evening school.

It would be usually much better for the class and perhaps not harmful to her if she were permitted to finish the season with her class. An amendment to this effect is therefore recommended.

One other amendment was suggested above (p. 55) for the purpose of allowing women who have developed good skill in teaching the English language to adult foreigners to continue in the evening school service with some relief in their day school work; and such an amendment is here recommended.

EDUCATIONAL CENTRES.

The history and present state of the educational centres are fully set forth in a very interesting report not long since published by the Committee on Extended Use of School Buildings. (School Document No. 9 — 1903, dated December 8th). Some general remarks of my own, intended to express my strong belief in the movement, and urging the masters and others to give it their sympathy and support, may be found in my reports of last year and the year before, under the titles “Extended Use of School-houses” and “The Schools as Social Centres.” These remarks could be repeated now, with added emphasis, in view of the experience of another season (the second) now drawing to a close. But I feel it unnecessary to do so. Yet it may be well to notice some questions of administration which have arisen, and which may need to be settled through legislation.

That the educational centre has not yet outgrown the experimental stage of its existence is generally recognized. No fixed course of study has yet been possible, and may not be for some time to come.

Neither have any specific regulations for the management of educational centres yet been adopted. New features in the work, unthought of last season, have appeared this season, and these in turn have suggested other new features for next season. And there are features which have already disappeared, or which may soon disappear or be modified.

The motive in the current management has been to undertake any promising kind of work of an educational character, learn by trial whether it interested the people of a given neighborhood, and, if it did, keep on, but, if not, drop it. In this way have been discovered certain subjects of instruction, chiefly of an industrial kind, which interest many people. Other subjects have appealed to but few people, or to people in some localities less than in others. Still other subjects have not yet been tried long enough to show their serviceableness or lack of it.

Popular subjects of instruction in all the centres are dressmaking, millinery, embroidery, basketry, raffia work, preparation for civil service examinations, carpentry, cookery, and gymnastics. Large and much interested classes in these subjects have been taught in all the centres, except that, for want of a suitable room, one centre was forced to give up carpentry, another cookery, and another gymnastics.

Popular lectures or informal talks on various topics have been given in all the centres, and generally with good success. The topics have included literature and authors, civil government, geology, steam heating and ventilation, applied physiology and hygiene (nursing), electricity, steam engineering, brick laying, and salesmanship. The last topic is a novelty. It offers practical advice to young people working in retail stores on the art of making sales.

Vocal music (simple chorus work) has been very successful in one centre, less so in others, and in one a failure. A lack of interest in the neighborhood is said to be the cause of this failure. But one season's trial can hardly be held as conclusive. In singing, everything depends on having a teacher who is just right for the work. There are excellent musicians who cannot teach a singing school. In the quest for a good singing teacher the educational centre has been at a disadvantage as compared with the evening high school, since the latter can offer double the pay for the same work. This inequality ought to be rectified.

The excellent idea of opening school-rooms in the evening for the day school pupils to come there and study their home lessons originated with the late Mr. Dutton of the Hancock School. For some years before educational centres were opened, Mr. Dutton and his assistants kept study-rooms open evenings for the use of the girls of the Hancock School. This study-room idea has been adopted in all the educational centres, but not with the same good success in every instance. In one instance, particularly, the study-room may have failed because it is not the custom of the day schools in the neighborhood to assign home lessons. Or the reason may have been that the young women just from the Normal School were unable to keep the boys quiet in the study-rooms—a task the more difficult in this instance, as the boys had no set lessons to get. The principal has suggested that another season the study-room feature be given up, and in its place an experiment with “junior boys’ clubs” be tried. An experiment with older boys' clubs in this same centre has been tried this season, with most encouraging success; and this seems to suggest what may be done with the younger boys who have no home lessons to get.

But if the study-room feature is to be retained in this and other centres, due heed should be given to one lesson already taught by experience, and that is that none but experienced teachers can carry on a study-room well. Even when the lessons have been learned in the first hour, and the second hour is spent in reading or in quiet games, the controlling presence of an experienced teacher is needed in the room. Now these experienced teachers are hardly to be found except in the day schools. To the objection that day school teachers ought not to be employed evenings in the educational centres, answer may be made that it is not necessary to employ any one teacher the whole season or half the season. This service could be distributed among a number of teachers, so that no one of them would have more than two or three weeks to serve. To preside in a room where study or quiet games are going on evenings would be a pleasant recreation for any good teacher, if she were not obliged to do it many weeks.

The features which as yet have appeared in but one centre each are the following: class in book-keeping, girls' class in Shakspeare, class in domestic science (care of the home), classes for teaching English to recent immigrants, class in violin playing, orchestra, class in parliamentary practice, class organized as a city council, carrying on business, free bureau of legal aid, boys' clubs, "Old South work" (in local history), printing, china painting, wood-carving, and Indian bead weaving. To these may be added a few which have appeared in two centres each, namely, stenography, mechanical drawing, steam engineering, and salesmanship. In two centres there have been reading-rooms, abundantly furnished with books from the Public Library. It is to be hoped that this feature may be extended to all the centres. The classes in steam engineering had the steam heating and ventilating plant in the basement of the school-house for objective illustration; and a collection of technical books was placed in one of the school-rooms for their use.

What new features may be suggested for next season does not yet appear. The mere perusal of the foregoing list convinces one that the educational centre can be made to interest people in a great many different ways not even yet suggested. It will be easily possible to offer instruction in variety enough to keep "the whole family in school."

The greater number of the subjects last mentioned have been tried but one season, or part of a season, and in but a single centre. It is too early to say whether such subjects can or ought to become permanent features of educational centre instruction. A longer trial is needed. It is also too early to assume that the store of promising suggestions is running low.

Therefore, it would be premature to undertake now the preparation of a fixed course of study for educational centres. For some time longer they might well be allowed to maintain their present character—that of free educational experiment stations, as it were.

Nor is it to be deplored that a specific code of regulations has not yet been adopted for the management of educational centres. In the light of the experience of two seasons, it will be possible to frame much better regulations than could have been suggested at the beginning or even at the end of the first season.

Meanwhile the administration of the centres has proceeded in accordance with the spirit of existing regulations, although it has not always been possible to adhere strictly to the letter. There have indeed been cases in which to follow "the letter" which "killeth" rather than "the spirit" which "giveth life" would have been fatal to the educational centre. For example, there is a general regulation, applicable to all examinations of teachers for certificates of qualification, which requires for admission to the examination that a person shall have had "at least one year's experience in teaching school." When milliners, dressmakers, and other industrial people in large numbers applied for certificates of qualification to teach the industrial classes in the educational centres, there was found not one of them who had ever had any "experience in teaching school." But it was thought that the spirit of the regulation was to require experience in the exercise of control over groups of persons for the purpose of giving them instruction; and that the cases of persons who had been entrusted with the control and instruction of apprentices in industrial establishments were fairly within the regulation so interpreted. So industrial people who had had experience enough with apprentices were admitted to the examination, and the educational centres were thus enabled to carry on their industrial work, which otherwise would have been impossible.

Another case happened when a number of intelligent, well-educated young Hebrews, college graduates and students, offered their services as teachers for classes of adult Hebrews quite ignorant of the English language. These young men, some of them, had faultless command of English themselves, and also were familiar with the Yiddish speech of the pupils. But they had had no "experience in teaching school," nor any other experience that could be considered an equivalent. They could not, therefore, be examined and certificated as teachers, nor employed as teachers, in the ordinary sense of the term.

Here, again, the regulations, which were intended to serve the ordinary purposes of the schools, were found to be ill-suited to the purposes of this new kind of school called the educational centre. What was done was to follow the precedent set in the case of certain evening schools in which foreigners abound and employ these young men as "interpreters." The legitimacy of this procedure has been questioned; and it may be admitted that, under a strict construction of the regulations, there seems to be some ground for doing so. But, in justification, it may be urged that all efforts to find teachers holding the necessary certificates and competent also to teach the English language by the objective method to classes of adult beginners had failed, and the remaining alternative was either to discontinue the classes or employ such young men as these, who could teach by the method of interpretation.

Incidentally it was expected that this experiment would afford some opportunity for testing the soundness of the claim that the method of interpretation (or translation) is superior to the objective method in the teaching of a language foreign to the learner. The results in the present case cannot be regarded as conclusive, although they are not without value in the discussion of the general question. Of the work done by the interpreters above mentioned, the principal of the West End Educational Centre, where they have been employed, says, "in general they have the merits and defects of the amateur and the volunteer. They easily take the standpoint of the pupil and are able to listen to his difficulties. They aid and hearten many who would otherwise despond. These instructors have shown marked natural ability, and in their painstaking devotion have left nothing to be desired . . . Thus they have a natural and an acquired hold upon their pupils and have contributed greatly to the success of our work." There have been six classes instructed by interpreters at this centre.

Many other instances of the unsuitableness of existing regulations when literally applied to the exigencies of the educational centres will occur to any one who will inquire how the instruction conveyed by the informal talks and lectures above referred to, and covering many widely various topics, can best be given. If the persons who give these talks and lectures must be only such as hold the Supervisors' certificate of qualification, then most of the topics must be omitted. It is not to be supposed that a college professor, or an instructor in any branch of technology, or an architect, engineer, or craftsman of recognized standing, will be subjected to an examination for a teacher's certificate of qualification before he can be permitted to talk or lecture on subjects whereupon he can speak with authority. Yet all such persons teach — may be held to be teachers — and, consequently, under the regulations strictly construed, ought to obtain the teacher's certificate or cease giving instruction. Their case is analogous to that of the interpreters already noticed, and it has been met in a similar way. They have been employed, not as teachers, but as lecturers, and as such will be paid for services rendered.

Enough, perhaps, has now been said to illustrate the nature of the questions that have been presenting themselves in the administration of the educational centres. It has not been thought best to patch the regulations every time one of these questions has arisen, but rather to proceed "under suspension of the rules," if necessary, to do the thing which needed to be done in the best manner for the time being. Later, when the constitution of the educational centre shall be more settled, and when the light of experience shall have become clearer, it will be time to give this new species of school a code of specific regulations and a fixed course of study.

An important question has been raised by the employment in the educational centres of a number of women who were teachers in the day schools. It has been claimed that these women ought not to have been so employed, for the reason that such employment in the evening schools is forbidden. Without either disputing or admitting this claim, it may be pointed out that when unexpectedly great multitudes of people were flocking into the educational centres there was no way to take care of them in the sudden emergency but to call upon some of the more energetic and experienced among the women teachers in the day schools. The custom thus originating in necessity has been continued for convenience during the current season.

But the question here involved ought not long to remain unsettled. The Board of Supervisors has made a report in which the opinion is expressed that whatever regulations be adopted relative to the employment of day school teachers in the evening, they should apply to the evening schools and educational centres alike. Furthermore, that Board would favor the evening employment of women teachers within quite narrow limits, and on the other hand would restrict the now unlimited evening employment of men. On this last point, see remarks already made on page 60. As to the evening employment of women, it may be remarked that when that employment is not too strenuous it is not likely to become injurious within a properly limited time. The difficulty will arise when women of insufficient strength permit a proper regard for their health to be overcome by other considerations. This difficulty perhaps could be avoided partly by limiting the employment, say to one year in every two, and partly by insisting on adequate health and strength as a condition precedent to any evening employment. There are places, too, as above pointed out, page 65, where the evening employment could easily be limited to two or three weeks at a time.

The total number of assistant teachers appointed to serve in the educational centres this season is 188, of whom 50 are men and 138 are women. Of the men, 13 hold permanent appointments in the public day schools of Boston, 1 holds a temporary appointment, and 26 are not otherwise employed in the public school service of Boston. Of the women, 64 hold permanent appointments in the public day schools of Boston, 20 hold temporary appointments (including special assistants, substitutes, etc.), and 54 are not otherwise employed in the public school service of Boston.

It should be noted that a considerable number of the women teachers of the day schools served but a short time in the educational centres. They served at the beginning, when they were most needed, and were dropped as soon as they could be spared. But the greater number have served for the whole season; and the reason for this has been, as already pointed out, the extreme difficulty of replacing them by other competent teachers not employed in Boston public day schools.

EMPLOYMENT OF NORMAL GRADUATES.

In June last, the Superintendent was requested to suggest such special legislation as would enable him to carry on an experiment proposed by him in his annual report for 1902, page 23. The plan was to place recent normal graduates as "pupil-teachers" under the instruction and direction of "training teachers," each training teacher, with the assistance of two pupil-teachers, to give all the instruction in two class-rooms of a primary or grammar school.

In September the appropriate legislation was suggested (see Proceedings of the School Committee for 1903, page 344), and final action thereupon took place November 10, 1903. (See Proceedings, pages 389, 417, and 433.)

Under the authority thus granted, however, no action has yet been taken, not because I have lost confidence in the proposed plan, but because I found before the end of October I had lost, for this year at least, my opportunity for action; since by that time all the normal graduates had been assigned to work in other ways.

This rather unexpected state of things had been brought about by a very large increase in the number of special assistants appointed on the plan suggested in the report already referred to, 1902, page 21.

The merits of this plan for providing the schools with needed help and the normal graduates with needed experience by appointing the latter as special assistants have been more widely appreciated this year than last; and the consequence has been that so many special assistants have been called for and appointed that very few normal graduates have been left for other kinds of service. For example, the permanent substitute corps has been only partially filled this year, and there has been a scarcity of occasional substitutes. Indeed, the special assistant has well nigh superseded the substitute in our lower grades of school service; and this change I believe to be distinctly advantageous both to the schools and to the normal graduates themselves.

Therefore, all the normal graduates being busy and a relatively comfortable state of things prevailing, I did not deem it wise to create a disturbance near the middle of the year by starting a new experiment. I had indeed ascertained that good "training teachers" could be found, and perhaps enough of them; but the reorganization of a school necessary for the purpose of giving a training teacher two classes to take care of is not an easy matter to effect except at the beginning of a school year before all the vacant teacherships have been filled. Moreover, some inquiries had satisfied me that I should not easily have found normal graduates willing to forsake the work they were doing and the pay they were getting to become pupil-teachers.

ATHLETIC SPORTS.

The athletic sports of high school boys in late years have assumed such large and growing importance that school authorities cannot well do otherwise than to recognize their own general responsibility in the premises, and to undertake the exercise of a wholesome control over the conduct of athletic organizations both in the schools and on the field. Either this must be done or such organizations in connection with the schools must be forbidden altogether, in order to abolish the evils which unquestionably flourish under neglect or lax control. The parents who entrust their boys to the care of the school authorities have a right to expect protection against such evils. On the other hand, they have a right to expect the benefits of athletic sports connected with the schools, if these can be secured uncontaminated by attendant evils.

I shall offer no argument for the abolition nor for the discouragement of athletic sports in our high schools. My sympathies all go the other way. For I believe that the benefits of good athletic sports are very great, and that the evils, with proper treatment, can be eradicated.

The problem is to eradicate the evils. It is not an easy problem; it is difficult—so difficult, indeed, that it has been given up as impossible in relation to certain forms of athletic sport under some conditions.

The popular game of football presents the problem just now in its most difficult form. The evils of this game are well known, and have caused much public discussion. In some colleges and in some preparatory schools in different parts of the country, the abolition of the game either has taken place or is seriously contemplated. Where the game is still permitted, the manner of playing it has been severely criticised. President Eliot, of Harvard University, in a recent official report says:

The game which has been conducted at Cambridge with the least intelligence and success is football—except from a pecuniary point of view.

And Professor Hollis, for seven years Chairman of the Committee on the Regulation of Athletic Sports, in his last report to the President of Harvard University says:

There is one phase of football, however, which should engage the attention of all collegemen,—that is the promotion of honor and fairness upon the field and in the preparation of teams. In the main the players are disposed to keep within the rules of their games, and if left to themselves, or if brought into contact only with the best advisers, would probably in the end make football a game wholly unobjectionable. It is unfortunate that the game should be regulated and directed so entirely by coaches whose point of view is strategy. Under the present system, violations of the rules can be concealed from the spectators and even from the officials of the game, thus giving an advantage to unscrupulous players and coaches.

As anything to beat the rules, so you escape detection and win the game, seems to be the spirit of the up-to-date college football player; and his admirers, the boys on the high school team, naturally enough are infected with the same unsportsmanlike spirit. Professor Hollis' language, above quoted, might just as well have been written of high school football. The head masters of our high schools have expressed themselves to the same effect. There are the same evils in high school football as in college football, the only difference being that the boys are a little younger.

It is not pleasant to read in the newspapers about "school football players in a slugging match," and to learn that one player had to be disqualified for deliberately kicking an opponent while the latter was on the ground; that the team to which the disqualified player belonged refused to play any more without him; that the team was supported by the coach in this refusal, and succeeded in forcing the reinstatement of the disqualified player; that the game was rougher than usual on account of the bitter feeling between the players; that this bitter feeling was manifested long before the game was started, caused mostly by the boasting of the players as to what they would do to each other in the game; and that "in order to swell the gate receipts" certain players disqualified for offences committed in previous games were "by agreement" allowed to play in this game—with the natural result that the trouble started with them.

It is not necessary to name the particular school teams engaged in this affair, nor is it reasonable to suppose this to be a fair sample of the match games played among high schools generally. Attention was sharply called to this case at the time precisely because it was an extreme one. But it stands not alone. There have been others like it; and there will be still others unless effectual control can be exercised. There was one case in which the team of a certain high school refused to go upon the field, where a great assembly of spectators was waiting for the game to begin, unless the head master would permit a certain disqualified player to take part in the game. These young strikers undertook to face the head master with the alternative of yielding to their demand or declaring "no game" and returning the gate money. The boys, however, had the good sense not to persist very long, and the game went on.

The case last stated illustrates the kind of responsibility which head masters are sometimes called upon to assume, and in which they should be explicitly assured of support by the ultimate authority of the School Committee. There should be left no room for the unfounded plea that the schoolmaster's authority ceases at the school-house door, and cannot be extended, for example, to the conduct of his boys on the athletic field, where they represent his school.

Among the things that can well be done by the School Committee to aid the head masters and teachers in promoting athletic sports and exercising a wholesome control over them are these three :

First — Provide each athletic organization with a competent instructor or coach whose character shall afford a sufficient guaranty against all unsportsmanlike proceedings. The irresponsible and the objectionable coaches must go. And unsportsmanlike games must go ; for their influence is immoral.

Second — Provide the head masters with the help needed to take care of the teams afternoons when the boys are allowed to be in the school-houses for bathing or other purposes connected with their athletic interests. The head master of the English High School states that there are often as many as a hundred boys in the building for various legitimate purposes, mostly athletic, in the afternoon from two till five or six o'clock. The same sort of thing happens in other schools. It is easy to see that help is needed here for proper care of the teams, for the exclusion of undersirable outsiders, and for the protection of school property. The coaches, perhaps, could afford this help if they were responsible persons charged with this duty. The alternative of closing the school-house against all such uses in the afternoon is not to be thought of.

Third — It would be a most excellent thing for the high school boys of Boston if the city would set aside some portion of its park land or else purchase a suitable tract of land elsewhere, and, under suitable regulations, give the boys exclusive use of it for an athletic field. In the old days the Parade Ground on the Common could be used by the high school boys very much as they pleased for football, baseball, or any other such sport. But now such use of that place is quite out of the question. The number of boys has been many times multiplied, and so in a general way have the facilities for games; for the Playstead on Franklin Park and other similar provisions are not to be overlooked. But what is needed just now is an athletic field that can be enclosed and properly policed for match games at which gate money is collected. It should have a stadium.

A High School Athletic Field, for the encouragement of school-boy athletic sports, would be an educational institution of no slight significance to the coming young men of Boston. The playground no less than the school-room is the essential theatre of wholesome education. If our Boston high schools have no playgrounds immediately connected with the buildings, ought they not to be provided with an ample one elsewhere? And will our high schools be really complete educational institutions until they are so provided? I think not.

Therefore, it would appear to be quite in the School Committee's general line of duty to endeavor to secure the coöperation of the City Government in providing the high school boys with an ample athletic field.

REPORTS OF SUPERVISORS.

The present regulation gives each Supervisor the right to prepare a formal report for publication in the Supplement to the Superintendent's Report. One such report, that of Mr. Brooks, has been offered. I have felt unwilling to ask the Supervisors this year to prepare formal reports, for the reason that most of them have been hard pressed by unusual demands upon their time. One Supervisor has been obliged to give much time to the enlarged organization of the evening high schools; another has found that the practical management of the Evening Lectures consumed all his leisure and took besides some of the time he used to give to his regular duties; another has been very busy with the preparation of a general exhibit of school work; and another has had by far the largest share of the extra work caused by the numerous special examinations that have been held in order to provide the educational centres with properly qualified industrial teachers. All the Supervisors have been obliged to reduce more or less the time given to their regular duties this year, in order to meet the new demands arising from new features of our growing school system.

SUPERVISORS' EXAMINATIONS.

In the Supplement, page 118, will be found a detailed statement of all the examinations, general and special, held by the Board of Supervisors during the year from April 1, 1903, to April 1, 1904. The general examinations draw large numbers of candidates — far larger than would seem warranted by the prospect of receiving appointments. Especially is this remarkable in relation to the certificates that qualify for service in the grammar and primary schools. In view of the large number of persons already holding the last named class of certificates, it may be well to omit the examination for their certificates next year. The special examinations have been unusually numerous, and have been so scattered through the year as to have consumed much valuable time.

EIGHT GRADES BELOW THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The report of Supervisor Brooks, printed in the Supplement, presents a very important matter for consideration, and I trust it will be carefully read by every grammar master in the city. Mr. Brooks explains a method of making promotions which will bring many children to the end of the elementary school course through eight grades, instead of nine, and place them in the high school better prepared to do the work there required.

In all parts of the country, excepting a few New England cities and towns, the system of eight grades below the high school prevails. In Boston the system of nine grades has prevailed for less than forty years. The change from four grammar grades to six was made in the Dwight School October 17, 1870.

Mr. Brooks has been familiar with the work of many high schools where the eight-grade system prevails. He is now also familiar with the work of Boston schools. If, as he says, he is "forced to the belief that the western pupils maintain themselves more easily, and do more effective work during their first year in the high school, than do the pupils who come from the Boston grammar schools," the pertinent question arises, What are we doing with our nine grades?

This question is not a new one with us. It has been considered again and again; but nothing has been done. The Board of Supervisors more than a year ago drew up a plan for changing the organization of the grammar schools from six grades to five. The plan was received by the School Committee and referred to the Committee on Courses of Study and Text Books, where it has been ever since. There has been no public discussion of this plan, and no open opposition to it has been manifested; but there is some reason to believe that a certain quiet opposition has made itself felt.

Now, if we are to wait for the reform of our system of grades until all opposition has ceased, we shall never do anything. No reform was ever carried by unanimous consent. History is only repeating itself. When the present system of six grammar grades was proposed, as a substitute for the old system of four grades, the change was stoutly opposed by those who had become habituated to the old system. And the present opposition to a change from six grades to five is nothing more than a disinclination to change working habits. This eight-grade question must soon come up again. The waste of time that affects the course of very many of the abler pupils, and the dawdling habits thereby engendered, call for some effectual remedy.

Meanwhile Mr. Brooks' plan can be adopted by any individual grammar master who is convinced that improvement in his school is possible by the means suggested. No legislation by the School Committee will be necessary. The plan merely proposes to change certain habits of administration that have grown up under the existing system of grades, without disturbing the grades themselves. The end proposed is most commendable: the formation of habits of independent activity and self-reliance in study. That there is good reformatory work to be done in all our schools relative to habits of study is well known, and there is favorable renown awaiting the teachers who will carry into effect such a reform.

Respectfully submitted,

EDWIN P. SEAVER,
Superintendent of Public Schools.

SUPPLEMENT.

REPORT OF STRATTON D. BROOKS, SUPERVISOR.

To the Superintendent of Public Schools :

SIR, — In accordance with Section 76 of the Rules and Regulations I submit the following report :

It is the purpose of the report to discuss the problems of administration which have arisen during the past year in connection with the Latin, high, and grammar schools under my supervision ; to give certain personal impressions of the quality of the work done ; and to point out the general trend of progress as it is now taking place. I cannot commend too highly the efficiency of the head-masters of these schools, nor can I overstate my appreciation of their cordial and hearty coöperation. The statement of conditions which follows is not based exclusively upon the schools directly assigned to me. By visitation and inquiry I have endeavored to determine the conditions prevailing in other schools. To the masters of these schools my thanks are due for information and assistance.

In comparing the work of the first-year high school pupils of Boston with that of the first-year pupils in many Western high schools to which I gave extended personal attention, I am forced to the belief that the western pupils maintain themselves more easily and do more effective work during their first year in the high school than do the pupils who come from the Boston grammar schools. When I consider the efficiency of the grammar school teachers, and especially the superior ability of the sub-masters and first assistants under whose instruction the grammar school pupils pass their later years, I feel sure that the deficiency in product arises from the system of organization, rather than from inferiority in the teaching body.

A few months of observation so strongly demonstrated the truth of this position that a large share of the later months of my service has been devoted to discussing the desirability and possibility of making such changes in the system of grading as would tend to improve the quality of the work done. The plan proposed is outlined below. Its principal feature is the provision for two sections, or groups, in each room. While not moving as rapidly as I could wish, I am gratified to report that in some schools substantial progress has been made and many of the preliminary steps of reorganization have been taken. In other schools it has been necessary to wait until certain ultra-conservative teachers are convinced that the proposed plan will really accomplish the results claimed. In all schools, however, the discussions have resulted in a marked advance in the direction of the underlying purpose of the reorganization.

This underlying purpose is to lay greater emphasis upon the power to study alone, to relieve the pupil more and more of his dependence upon the teacher, and to develop in him the habit of independent and continuous effort accompanied with the ability to meet and conquer difficulties without continually expecting assistance. On entering the high school, the pupil is thrown upon his own resources. His lesson is assigned and he is told to get it. In too many cases the inadequacy of his training is at once apparent. Though he is well equipped with many facts which it is highly desirable that he should know, yet these facts have been given to him rather than acquired by him. He has been trained to receive, not to find and create. He lacks the power to do, which is of vastly more importance than anything which he has done.

It is toward the correcting of these evils that the proposed plan is directed. It is not at all a new and untried scheme, but represents the common practice of a great majority of the schools of the country. Neither is it the best nor the most flexible system of promotions. It is recommended because a more radical departure from the existing conditions would be less favorably listened to. The accompanying diagram will illustrate the plan.

Let the line A B represent the amount of work outlined in the established course of study. If this is divided into nine equal parts, each division, 1a, 2a, etc., will represent the work done in one year. The recommended plan proposes that the more able pupils shall be kept in separate groups and allowed to work faster than the slower ones. At the end of the first year such pupils will have completed more than the slower section as shown by the distance marked 1b on the line C D. By the end of the first year they will have completed the regular first grade work and made some start upon second grade work. If kept in a separate section during the second year, they can complete the regular second grade work and make a larger advance upon third. Since the purpose is to have them gain one year in eight, their entire course is represented by the line C D, and the amount of gain will thus average five weeks per year.

After such a system is in full operation, there will be in each room two groups of approximately twenty-five each; for example, 6a and 6b, or 6a and 5b. From this condition various advantageous results arise :

1. Under the proposed grouping neither the point of beginning nor the point of ending with any particular group is arbitrarily determined in advance. Neither is the amount of work determined for the purpose of fitting the average pupil, nor by any exigencies of administration, but solely by the educational needs and educational possibilities of the particular group under consideration. Each teacher may begin with each group of children where she finds them, give them the instruction fitted to their needs, and take them as far as they can go with profit. This is a fundamental and marked difference from the present organization in which a teacher is supposed to begin at a set point and end at another set point. Theoretically, the group of fifty children sent to her have reached the first point, have the same ability, and may all with equal profit reach the prescribed goal. In practice, no such condition has existed or can exist. Neither is the matter improved very much when a school having two fifth grades puts the better pupils into one and the poorer into another. The better class may complete more than the regular work, but the following September the deficiencies in number caused by those transferring to other schools and by those dropping out must be made up by bringing in pupils who have not had the extra work. This has frequently been done, but its disadvantages are so obvious that many schools having more than one grade of the same rank purposely mix the good pupils with the poor, and require all to reach the point set for the beginning of the next grade; or, if the better pupils are put by themselves, they do not go further than the others, but fill in the extra time by working extra problems and by similar devices. In some schools sections are maintained, but the pupils in both sections cover the same amount of work in the year. Such a sectioning of classes has some advantages, but it does not provide the possibility of allowing pupils to go as far as they can with profit. Under the proposed scheme, however, any group may start where it should, and end where it can, and be taken care of without difficulty.

2. The plan adds to the present arbitrarily set division into grades a flexible and variable division into groups and bases this division upon the working ability of the pupils. The division into grades is determined by financial conditions and the number of pupils assigned to each teacher has been set at fifty. In assigning pupils to grades, no great departure can be made from this arbitrarily determined number. If one hundred fifth-grade pupils are to be sent to two rooms, but little attention can be given to difference in ability to work, unless, perchance, just fifty happen to be better than the other fifty. But by the proposed plan, when once fifty children have been assigned to a room, they may be made into groups with no other consideration than that of placing together those who can most nearly progress at the same rate of speed.

3. The plan provides for a close assorting into groups containing pupils of the same ability and rapidity of acquisition. At any given time of the year, instead of nine grades, a school will have its pupils assigned to at least seventeen groups, having different degrees of advancement. This provides many easy gradations, renders possible transfers from group to group, and avoids the tremendous loss often entailed by compelling a pupil to repeat an entire year's work. For example, a pupil in 4b doing work which, though fair, is not sufficient to enable him to proceed with 5b, will not be required to repeat the entire work of 4*b*, but will be promoted to 5*a*. This will transfer him to another teacher and place him with a class working at a slower rate of speed. Furthermore, he will repeat in 5*a* the latter half of the work covered in 4*b*, an amount of review sufficient to enable him to maintain himself.

4. The plan recognizes the principle that some children can with profit go faster than others, and provides a way of escape from that harm which comes to the more able from having educational material presented too slowly. The present course of study prescribes an amount of work in each year which can be accomplished by the medium student. As a result, many of the best are compelled to mark time. Such a condition causes a loss of interest and tends to develop dilatory habits of work. Because of the greater uniformity of the groups, and because the limit set for each group is not fixed in advance, but may be increased or diminished to suit the needs of the group, each pupil may more nearly than under the present system be allowed to go as fast as he can.

5. The proposed plan allows all pupils, who can, to shorten the time in the grammar school by one year. Its adoption will furnish a satisfactory solution of the question of reducing the number of grades to eight. There is no doubt that a reduction of a year in the time taken for grammar-school work would be a very great advantage to many pupils. Those who advocate a change to eight grades have these pupils in mind. On the other hand, there is no less doubt that a certain proportion of the grammar-school pupils may not with profit cover the amount of work prescribed in less than nine years. Those who have in mind the latter class insist upon the retention of nine grades. The adoption of the proposed plan makes it possible, without in any way modifying or shortening the present established course of study, to allow all pupils of superior ability to cover the work in eight years. At the same time it in no way interferes with those who should use nine years for the same work.

Furthermore, it should be emphasized that this gain of one year made by the bright pupils is distributed over the entire course; that is, the pupil does all the work at a slightly increased rate of speed. It is evident that this is immeasurably superior to the plan occasionally used whereby a special section is urged through three years' work in two, and to the practice now in vogue of having a pupil skip a grade either by a double promotion at the end of the year, or by transfer during the year, as from the middle of one grade to the middle of the next.

6. In so far as it enables pupils to complete the course in less time, the plan would save money for the city. It is impossible to say what proportion of the pupils will be able to shorten the time in the grammar school. In some districts the proportion will be much higher than in others, but by the flexibility of the system, each school could adapt its work to the needs of its pupils. My observation of schools working under the system leads me to believe that after it had been in operation long enough to enable pupils to profit by its advantages through their entire school course, at least sixty per cent. of the pupils will cover the work in eight years.

Undoubtedly, for many of these, the saving of a year will be of much financial advantage to parents upon whom the burden of sending their children to school rests heavily. This saving of a year will increase the number of grammar-school graduates by enabling some of those who can attend but eight years to complete the entire course.

7. While the plan is apparently complex, it in practice actually simplifies the problems of administration in many ways. One illustration will suffice. Given eighty-six fourth-grade pupils and sixty-four fifth-grade pupils. Under the present scheme this would necessitate two fourth-grade teachers with forty-three pupils each, and one fifth-grade teacher with sixty-four pupils. For this latter a special assistant would be employed. Under the proposed plan, the master would select a group of thirty-six fifth-grade pupils and a group of fourteen fourth-grade pupils, each group being composed of pupils of as near the same ability as possible. These fifty would be assigned to one teacher, the remaining fifty fifth-grade pupils to another, and the remaining fifty fourth-grade pupils to a third. The last two grades would then be subdivided into groups according to the ability of the pupils. Thus the work of the teachers would be equalized and the city would save the expense of the special assistant.

The plan, when in operation, will render necessary considerable personal supervision on the part of the master. The various fifth grades will not reach the same point at the same time, and so in those schools in which the supervision is exercised largely through uniform examinations sent from the office, the work will be increased or the nature of the supervision would need to be changed.

8. Most important of all, perhaps, the adoption of the plan will compel the pupil to learn how to work without assistance. From a third to a half of the time he will be required to take care of himself while the teacher is instructing the other group. At present in many rooms approximately an hour is given to a recitation. During the whole of this time the pupils work with the teacher. If a sixty-minute recitation is devoted to drilling fifty individual pupils, the result is that each pupil gets a chance to recite but little more than one minute and listens nearly fifty-nine minutes. A single visit to such a recitation shows the enormous waste of time, and demonstrates that the pupil cannot listen with interest or profit for such a length of time. Under the proposed division into groups, each group of twenty-five will be given thirty minutes. Thus each pupil will receive, as before, his minute of recitation, but he will be required to listen but twenty-nine minutes. During the other thirty minutes he will study. This amount of time saved each day from four or more subjects, means through the years an amount of time and effort which cannot fail to establish habits of work and methods of study which will correct the fault pointed out at the beginning of this report.

9. Though this applies only to the inefficient teachers, the plan will render necessary a modification of teaching methods. Under it the pupil gives as much time to each subject as he does now, but the teacher gives but half as much. It is therefore necessary for her to have definitely in mind before beginning a lesson just which portions must be taught and which the pupils can do alone. She must so arrange her work that when the half-hour of instruction is completed, she will have taught the new points and explained enough, but not too much, with the final result that she can set for her pupils a task for the remaining half-hour, which, though presenting difficulties, yet lies within the possibility of attainment. It is evident that such a consideration of the work will lead to a greater appreciation of the difficulties of the pupils and to greater efficiency of presentation. When both the reciting and the studying are done with the pupils this consideration has been neglected by the less efficient teachers.

10. When once past the difficulties of initiation, the proposed plan will reduce the labor of the teacher, or rather it will change its character so that it can be done with less waste of nervous energy. On account of the close grouping of pupils, the tiresome waits for the slower ones will be eliminated, and it will be possible to give the pupils an amount of work sufficient to keep them all busy and interested the whole time. This, in addition to the increased ability of the pupils to keep themselves profitably employed when not under the teacher's eye, will create a condition of activity and interest which will materially reduce the difficulties of discipline and relieve the nervous strain upon the teachers. It is admitted that the establishing of any different order of procedure will temporarily increase the amount of attention necessary, and that with some teachers the reorganization of material and methods will be unavoidable. In the end, however, in proportion to the result accomplished, the amount of work will be materially diminished.

The presentation of the advantages of the division into groups has by implication pointed out the difficulties under which even the most efficient teachers work. When, perchance, the teacher is inefficient, the trouble becomes indeed great. With the too talkative teacher, the pupils may in truth be said to be merely spectators while the teacher works. In some rooms it would be difficult to find thirty consecutive seconds in which the pupils were allowed to think without interruption. In such rooms study is never known. The attitude of the pupils becomes passive and receptive, never active and initiative. All day, all the year, and often for years to follow, the pupils listen, or pretend to, and wait and wait. They absorb, and soak in, and reproduce; but they do not do, or find, or acquire for themselves. Let me emphasize that this does not apply to all schools, nor even to all teachers in any one school; but let me also emphasize even more that it ought not to apply to any teacher in any school, and likewise that the present system of organization of the grades greatly increases the evil effects of such poor teaching.

During the discussions of the past year certain specific objections have been raised. Of them it may be said that some are concerned with difficulties already existing in the present system, some are concerned with temporary difficulties of initiation of the proposed plan, and the others can be met by modifications suited to local conditions.

The most uncontrovertible proof that such a reorganization is essential is the fact that certain teachers of the upper grades who have tried the plan during the year report that it is a failure because they cannot get the children to use their study time with profit. Children who have been trained from the beginning to study are not at a loss as soon as the teacher ceases to ask questions or to tell what to do next.

The proposed reorganization is based upon certain principles explained above, and should not be confused with any sectioning of classes not based upon those principles. Nor should it be condemned because of certain sporadic and ineffectual experiments to section classes which were not continued long enough to obtain the advantages which come from an established system. The bulk of experience the country over has shown that the system, once established, is practical and effective.

INDUSTRIAL COURSES IN GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

While the foregoing has been recommended because it will improve the work done by those going to the high school, it deserves more emphatic recommendation because it will give greater power to those who do not enter the high school. For him whose schooling ceases with the grammar school, the ability to master new knowledge is of vastly greater importance than any knowledge he may already have acquired. Under the present prescribed course, no distinction is made between the pupils preparing for high school and those who are not, and so long as this condition remains the development of general power must be the primary object of the school.

Without question, however, the time will soon be at hand when the public school must do more in the line of adapting its work more definitely to the specific needs of those pupils who go directly from the grammar school to the work of earning a livelihood. Industrial education, as distinguished from manual training, is being advocated in many places. New York City has established a Girls' Technical High School. In my opinion the place for such education is in the grammar school.

I wish to renew my recommendation made a year ago to the Committee on Courses of Study and Text Books, that one or more grammar schools be authorized to experiment by adding a year of work of an industrial character, and in connection therewith to consider a modification of the upper grammar grades so as to furnish specific preparation for the industrial course, while at the same time maintaining the integrity of the preparation for the high school.

THE HIGH SCHOOLS.

In the high schools the work of the individual teachers has been, with but few exceptions, of excellent character. Two elements, however, have prevented the highest attainment. One of these is the condition of the grammar school graduates previously pointed out; the other is the examinations for admission to college.

Because the pupils must take examinations in several subjects at the end of the third and fourth year, it is necessary to teach or at least to review, most of these subjects in the year of the examination. As a result the pupil divides his time among five or, in extreme cases, six or seven subjects with the necessary superficiality of preparation. The preparation for the examination also affects the nature of the work. For example, a portion of the time in advanced chemistry must be devoted to a repetition of elementary details, in order to insure success in the examinations. Or again, in history, pupils repeat the course in Greek and Roman history. In some subjects the last six or eight weeks are given over to practising for examinations.

Considerable progress has been made toward rectifying these conditions. It is well demonstrated by experience that it is better for a pupil to pursue not more than four studies at a time, and the new schedule of points and periods submitted by the head masters have moved further towards establishing that condition. During the year nearly all of the high schools have been placed upon the accredited list of the New England College Entrance Certificate Board. Graduates doing satisfactory work will be admitted to nearly all of the colleges of New England without examinations. As soon as this plan is in more perfect operation it will render possible a material improvement in the character and arrangement of the high school work.

The examination for admission to the Normal School has an effect similar to that of the examination for admission to college. The examination has the effect of prescribing a part of the high school course of those who wish to enter the Normal. This prescription lacks definiteness, for under the present system those who have had one year of drawing or French and those who have had four take the same examination. Better preparation would result by requiring the candidates for admission to the Normal School to present certificates of proficiency in subjects wholly or partially prescribed for the first three years of the high school course, and by limiting the examination to the fourth year subjects.

THE LATIN SCHOOLS.

The efficiency of the two Latin schools cannot be too highly praised. Both are, however, in serious need of a reorganization of the so-called "out-of-course classes." Pupils are admitted to the regular course in the Latin schools from the sixth grade and remain six years. In the past, when but few pupils asked for admission after completing the grammar school course, it was customary in the first year to rush them over an amount of Latin sufficient to enable them to enter the regular class at the end of the year, thus in theory covering in one year that which the regular pupils did in three. When there were but few pupils it was impossible to maintain them in a separate section, and such a proceeding, though it has no educational justification, was yet necessary for financial and administrative reasons.

This practice still maintains, except that during the last year slight modifications have been made. The financial and administrative reasons for its continuance no longer exist. At present half, and frequently more than half, of the pupils entering the Latin schools are in the out-of-course classes. It is possible without additional expense to maintain them in separate sections through three, or, if necessary, through the entire four years of the course. There should, therefore, be for them a course of study made with reference to their present needs, and not based upon the effort to make them conform to the course prescribed for pupils who have come in from the sixth grade. Furthermore, the purpose of the school is not to teach Latin, but "to fit for entrance to colleges of the highest grade." It is stated in the Catalogue of Harvard University that the maximum amount of Latin required for admission can be accomplished in the best high schools with five recitations per week for four years. Certainly if high schools can do this then the Boston Latin schools can. The excessive concentration represented by requiring ten hours per week of Latin during the first year is harmful, both in theory and in practice. I deem it highly essential both for the sake of the pupils and the schools that the Latin schools establish a regular college preparatory course for grammar school graduates.

To summarize, the following recommendations have been made:

I. That the group system be established in the grammar schools.

II. That one or more grammar schools be authorized to experiment with the establishing of an industrial course.

III. That the high school course be modified so as to make better preparation for the Normal School.

IV. That the work of the out-of-course classes in the Latin schools be modified by establishing a regular college preparatory course for grammar school graduates.

ANNUAL SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

ANNUAL SCHOOL FESTIVAL, 1904.

The Annual School Festival in honor of the graduates of the grammar schools was held in the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Building, Huntington avenue, on the afternoon of Saturday, June 25, 1904, at 2.30 o'clock P.M., under the direction of the Committee of the School Board appointed for the purpose, consisting of Mr. J. Porter Crosby (Chairman) and Messrs. Davis, Ernst, Mulvey, and Pierce.

More than thirty-seven hundred graduates were present, occupying the entire floor.

The Chief Marshal was Mr. Charles C. Haines, master of the Lewis School, who was assisted by a staff of marshals composed of other masters.

Mr. James M. McLaughlin, Director of Music, was in general charge of the singing by the pupils, assisted by Mr. Leonard B. Marshall and Mr. John A. O'Shea, assistant directors.

The collations were furnished by Mr. D. Maddalena. Carter's Band was in attendance; and the hall was very tastefully decorated by R. Lehmann & Co. Through the courtesy of the Boston Elevated Railway Company the usual reduction in fares for the transportation of pupils and teachers on the cars of that company was continued. The bouquets for the graduates, four thousand in number, were furnished by Edward McMulkin, the committee deeming it expedient to purchase the entire number required from one responsible concern rather than to divide the order among a number of florists as had been the custom in previous years.

The exercises began promptly at 2.30 o'clock with the entrance of the committee and their guests, consisting of Mayor Collins and President Brett of the School Committee.

A detachment of the School Cadets then marched from the rear of the hall to the platform, escorting the national colors, which were placed on the platform and saluted; three large flags suspended from the roof trusses were unfurled, releasing a shower of red, white and blue confetti, and the graduates, led by the band, arose and sang two stanzas of the Star Spangled Banner.

The Chairman of the Festival Committee then delivered the opening address as follows:

ADDRESS OF MR. J. PORTER CROSBY.

Graduates of the Boston Grammar Schools: It is a custom that has been honored by a great many years' observance for the City of Boston to call together annually at this time of the year the graduates of its schools, and particularly in later years the graduates of its grammar schools, and to hold a festival in their honor, which is intended to be a happy and enjoyable termination of their course. It is a custom peculiar, I believe, to our city, and that is perhaps one reason why there is so strong and general a desire not to pass it over as was done last year.

While the main features of this celebration are meant to be festivity and gaiety—and I do not wish to mar them—it also has a serious aspect, and I would be departing from the time-honored usage of the occasion should I fail to call your attention briefly to what this day means to you in its effect upon your future.

You have just completed the first important part of the education that is provided for you by our city, and you have now received what is considered a fair foundation for a good education. I hope and trust that the benefits you have received will prove worthy of the spirit in which the gift has been offered to you; I hope they have been such as to make you fully realize the value and importance of education, so that, instead of being satisfied, you are filled with an ardent desire to still further avail yourselves of the educational advantages that are open to you in various branches of learning in the institutions which the city provides to fit its youth for college, for the mechanical trades or for commercial pursuits. If you are unable to attend the day schools, many, if not all, of the same advantages are open to you in the evening schools. If the further pursuit of knowledge is to be more difficult than it has heretofore been, that very difficulty should make it more dear to you.

So far you have been travelling the same road together, but to-day your paths divide. Your work has been along general lines to build up a good foundation. You are now to take up special lines, and you must decide what those special lines shall be. This occasion, therefore, marks an important turning point in your lives. In a large measure you are now about to decide what your life work shall be. While you may not necessarily follow the course you now select, he is certainly most fortunate who is able to select at the outset that line of work for which he is best fitted; and let him then pursue it faithfully. It is true that there are some people of such brilliant powers as to be able to successfully do almost anything to which they turn their attention; but with the large majority the greatest success comes only with hard, earnest, persistent effort.

It does not fall to the lot of many to do in this world the things that are commonly called great, or to fill the positions that are commonly looked upon as the places of high honor and public renown. But the progress of the world, material and moral, is not advanced so much by the exceptionally brilliant work of the few who may be called leaders as it is by the great mass of the people who are constantly endeavoring to improve their own condition and that of others. Many of the noblest characters are found in the every-day walks of life. How many of you in your school life, for instance, have had the good fortune to have been brought in contact with some good teacher or master who may hardly be known outside of her or his own school district, and yet from whose manliness, from whose unselfish helpfulness, integrity and uniformly honorable conduct and life you have, notwithstanding your youth, felt a great and strong influence for good upon your own lives and conduct. You are all old enough to realize that when you are with such a person you have a strong desire to display in your own conduct the same good qualities.

One of the noblest characters who ever lived in this city, the late Phillips Brooks, once said: "No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, pure and good without the world being the better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of this goodness."

As you pursue your education along whatever lines you may choose, always bear in mind that the development of good, strong qualities of character should be the most important element of that education. For your material prosperity you must learn from books, from observation and from experience the material things of the scientific, business and social affairs of life; and it is to be hoped that the schools have furnished and will continue to furnish you with that part of your education that will enable you to acquire your full share of material happiness and success. But never allow yourselves to believe that you will do well to educate your minds for the achievement of material success and let the development of your character take care of itself. If you do so, and use the knowledge and powers you have acquired for dishonest and dishonorable, selfish purposes, it would be better for yourselves and for the city which has helped you that you were never educated. As the material prosperity of the state is measured by the material prosperity of its individual citizens, so is the character of the state determined and its honor upheld and preserved, or its good name degraded, by the character of its individual citizens. The city asks of you no financial payment for the advantages it has provided and still offers to provide for you in its great and extensive school system of to-day, but you can best repay to it the debt of gratitude that you owe for the benefits you receive by making yourselves good, honorable and useful men and women.

Then followed two selections sung by a chorus composed of graduates of the Christopher Gibson, Henry L. Pierce, and Mather Schools, under the direction of Mr. Leonard B. Marshall.

THE CHAIRMAN. — It is customary on these occasions to have the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of the Commonwealth speak to the graduates, but I regret to say that neither of them is able to be here to-day.

This festival, however, as you know, is provided for you by the City of Boston, and we are fortunate in having with us, as usual, the Chief Executive of the City. Although his reputation is national, and international as well, the esteem in which he is held by the people of his own city must be a great source of happiness to him. It was in order that he might take his customary part in this celebration that the date of holding it was advanced. I take pleasure in now presenting to you His Honor the Mayor of Boston, Patrick A. Collins.

ADDRESS OF HIS HONOR MAYOR COLLINS.

Mr. Chairman and Young Graduates: The duty assigned to me this sultry day is a purely physical and not a vocal one. I am commanded, as it were, to hand each of the boys and girls a bouquet as a reminder that it is the happy month of June, and that this is their gala day. I can assure you that it makes me feel young again to join in this holiday and look into your radiant faces. The future is yours. I congratulate you who are to go on to a higher education, and I congratulate also those whose course at school is ended.

There is not a boy or girl in this great audience who has not had at least twice the school advantages that I have had. But I discovered long ago that there was a public library in the City of Boston, which is one of the greatest educational institutions in the whole world, and I proceeded to make use of it.

The boys and girls who leave the grammar schools to-day, and who are not going higher in our regular educational system, will still find the evening schools open, and also the great public library, with its eighty-four delivery stations.

Although your paths diverge from this joyous celebration, may all your journeyings through life be pleasant and prosperous, and may God bless you in all your undertakings.

At the conclusion of the Mayor's address two selections were sung by a chorus composed of graduates of the Chapman, Frothingham, Hancock, and Prescott Schools, under the direction of Mr. John A. O'Shea.

THE CHAIRMAN. — The School Committee being that branch of the City Government under whose charge you, in your school life generally as well as upon this occasion, directly come, it is natural and customary that the first and last words spoken to you here should be by representatives of that Board. I have the honor to now present to you one who like yourselves received his education in the public schools of Boston, Mr. John A. Brett, the President of the School Committee.

ADDRESS OF MR. JOHN A. BRETT.

Graduates of the Grammar Schools: It is indeed an inspiring scene which confronts us here to-day. No one rightly constituted can look without a quickened pulse upon these four thousand eager, alert, and well instructed young people just at the threshold of life.

The future lies before you fair and inviting, and full of opportunities. It is yours to make or to mar. There is as yet nothing that you painfully regret, nothing that you wish undone. The book of life is just opened, and its page is fresh and clear and uninscribed, and you are about to set down in imperishable characters the story of your career.

Those who have directed your steps hitherto have not been forgetful of this momentous day. But rather your minds have been stored, and your faculties have been trained, and your characters have been shaped and strengthened so that now when the grave problems of life come pressing upon you for decision you may be guided right, and, so, act right.

Your public school training was planned and carried out primarily to make you true to yourselves,

“And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.”

Thou canst not then be false to the state.

And who shall presume to question the patriotism of our graduates? The public schools are the nurseries of patriotic citizenship. They are the great amalgamating and unifying force in our political system. And he who has not found his training during his early and impressionable years in the common schools ; who has not met his fellows of high or low degree in the pure democracy of the school-room ; who has not, in its equalizing atmosphere, come to know them and to esteem them, and to value them and to feel and to share in the common trust, and common faith, and common respect, has missed an experience and a lesson that nothing else can supply.

And who should prize his citizenship more than our graduates ? They know its priceless privileges. They know its dignity and its duties. They have read diligently the history of our land, and they are resolved, I am sure, that what was founded by the fathers in labor and in suffering and in death, and what was saved by the countless heroes, amid devastation and woe, this “government of the people, for the people, by the people, shall not perish from the earth.”

We dismiss you to-day in perfect confidence that in the manifold relations of life you will acquit yourselves well ; that you will be just, and so, fearless ; that you will be liberty loving, and so, law abiding.

My young friends, I tender you the heartiest congratulations of the Boston School Committee, and their best wishes to each of you for a future filled with honor and success.

At the conclusion of the address of the President of the School Committee, the entire audience joined in singing two stanzas of “America,” after which the graduates marched across the platform, each school being designated by a banner with the name of the school painted thereon, and each individual graduate received a bouquet from the hands of the Mayor or of the President of the School Committee. After the distribution of the flowers a collation was served to the graduates, who were then dismissed, and to the committee and their guests.
